The District was crisped to a 96-degree turn yesterday—which is as hot as it has been here all year—and at least seven persons were felled by the heat.

The mercury hit its peak of 96 at 3:48 p. m., equaling a previous summer high mark set on June 26 and July 5 and 6.

Weather out of the same mold is forecast today, although the high temperature mark may be only about 90.

To Begin With Low of 75

The Weather Bureau said the day will begin with a low of about 75 and then bloom into "mostly sunny and continued quite warm" weather.

Yesterday's heat brought an early release from their jobs for about 3000 District workers and about 9000 Federal employes. All of them work in temporary or non-air-conditioned buildings.

The Weather Bureau said it considered the 44 per cent humidity which accompanied the 96-degree temperature as "pretty high but not as bad as the day before."

Yesterday's high temperature reading fell seven degrees short of the record 103 temperature for the date set back in 1926.

Freedmen's Hospital reported two heat prostration cases. Paul Glass, 38, of 64 R st. nw., was taken to the hospital after he collapsed at 7th and T sts. nw. His condition is "favorable." Fred West, 46, of 1745 Kalorama rd. nw., was brought to the hospital from Shepherd School, where he is employed as a janitor.

Emergency Hospital sent its ambulance to 5th and W sts. nw. to treat a man identified only as Gilbert Riggs. He was treated at the scene and went home.

Laborer Is Overcome

Gallinger Hospital reported it had treated a laborer overcome by the heat but did not have his name and address available.

Ambulance runs on heat cases were also made to 23d st. and Constitution ave. nw., to the Bureau of Engraving Annex, and to 906 G st. nw.

In New York City, where asphalt pavements melted and sidewalks buckled under the assault of 90-degree heat, the health department said the death rate had dropped and no heat prostrations were reported.

"This kind of weather is beneficial to people," said a New York City health official.

Snelling Gets Year To 18 Months for Embezzlement

Santa Fe, N. M., July 22 (U.P.).—District Judge Luis Armijo today sentenced former Los Alamos public relations director Tracy Snelling to one year to 18 months in the New Mexico Penitentiary for embezzlement.

The 37-year-old suspended Atomic Energy Commission aide was sentenced after he pleaded guilty to taking $1000 of American Red Cross money which he had collected as chairman of a fund-raising drive at the atomic project in northern New Mexico.

The judge noted that the $1000 which Snelling took had been paid back to the Red Cross by Snelling's family. Armijo said he appreciated the fact that Snelling was a war veteran, but he added "I don't think justice would be done with a suspended sentence in this case."

School-Aid Stand Denounced

Mrs. Roosevelt's 'Record' Called 'Anti-Catholic' by Spellman

New York, July 22 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman today assailed Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for "your record of anti-Catholicism" and specifically denounced her opposition to Federal aid for parochial schools.

The Cardinal, Archbishop of the New York diocese, based his attack on the former First Lady's attitude on the controversial school aid question as expressed in her daily newspaper columns.

"Whatever you may say in the future," Cardinal Spellman wrote Mrs. Roosevelt, "your record of anti-Catholicism stands for all to see—a record which you yourself wrote on the pages of history which cannot be recalled—documents of discrimination unworthy of an American mother."

Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary said at her Hyde Park home that the wife of the late President had received the letter, but planned no comment on it. The Cardinal made it public, mailing it special delivery yesterday.

In her columns, Mrs. Roosevelt emphatically denied that her stand on the school issue stemmed from religious prejudice. She said it was based on the American tradition of separation of church and state.

At issue in the dispute is the aid-to-education bill sponsored in the House by Representative Graham A. Barden (D., N. C.). It would limit the help to public schools.

Cardinal Spellman said Mrs. Roosevelt aligned herself with the backers of the Barden bill in her June 23 column.

Religious Controversy

School Aid Bill by Barden Is Bottled Up in Committee

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Barden aid-to-education bill, which has touched off a Nation-wide controversy on religious lines, is bottled up in the House Committee on Education and Labor with little prospect of immediate action.

The measure introduced by Representative Graham A. Barden (D., N. C.) differs in several important respects from the Senate-passed Federal aid-to-education bill.

A 13-member subcommittee, of which Barden was chairman, recently voted 10 to 3 to report it favorably to the full Committee on Education and Labor.

The committee, however, is giving priority to FEPC legislation, and has not received the report.

The Barden bill would:

1. Provide a Federal appropriation of $300,000 annually for the States; $50,000 for Alaska, $250,000 for Hawaii; 14 million dollars for Puerto Rico, and $200,000 for the Virgin Islands.

However, the bill states:

"Amounts paid to any State under this act shall be expended only for current expenditures for public elementary and secondary schools in such State."

It sets up a formula, involving the number of school-age children in a State and the average of total annual income payments to individuals in the State, to determine

Idle Pay Hits $154 Million High in June

Congress Groups Vote Bill to Aid States in Plans For Public Works

Unemployment compensation payments in June hit a record $154,696,000, the Federal Security Agency reported yesterday.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, said total benefit payments to jobless covered by the unemployment compensation law aggregated 800 million dollars in the first six months of 1949. He said that was almost twice the amount paid in the first six months of 1948.

The figures were published as Senate and House committees moved simultaneously to carry out President Truman's request for funds to plan a "shelf" of public works projects to be built in case of a severe depression.

Chavez Bill Approved

The Senate Public Works Committee approved a bill drafted by Chairman Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.), authorizing 100 million dollars in Federal aid to the States for blueprinting projects over the next two years.

A few hours later the House Public Works Committee approved an almost identical measure.

Mr. Truman said in his midyear economic report to Congress that no large-scale public works program is warranted by the current business slump, but warned that it would be "dangerous" not to build up a backlog of planned projects ready to go into construction in case conditions grow worse.

The State-aid program would authorize loans to States and their public works agencies to help finance surveys, architect studies, designs and economic investigations. Advances to the States would be repaid when actual construction begins.

Funds for the program must be provided later in an appropriation bill.

Agency Reports Ordered

The Senate committee also ordered reports from half a dozen Federal departments and agencies on the status of their own public works programs. It wants complete schedules of the Army, Agriculture Department, Interior Department, General Services Administration, Federal Security Agency and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Those agencies are involved in construction of roads, airports, reclamation projects, flood control and river and harbor improvements, public buildings and other construction projects.

The survey is intended to provide an up-to-date picture of where the Government stands on public works projects that could be used in case a declining economy calls for that type of pump-priming.

Goodwin reported that unemployment compensation claims for the week ended July 16 rose to a new all-time weekly high of 2,182,600 applications.

The June payments were made to an average weekly number of 1,814,000 persons. They received an average payment for total unemployment of $20.06.

Senate Fight Opens To Rid Marshall Plan Of Five Restrictions

Parliament Guarded

Communist Attack Feared As Pact Is Debated in Paris

Paris, July 22 (U.P.).—Thousands of tough Security Guards in full battle kit surrounded Parliament tonight in the belief that angry Communists might storm the building as the National Assembly opened debate on ratification of the Atlantic pact.

The entire Parliament Building, the nearby Foreign Office and other government buildings were isolated by the security guards and reinforcements of heavily armed police. Traffic was diverted.

Communist leaders, seething with anger over the prospect of final French adherence to the pact, had called on their followers and fellow-travelers to do everything in their power to prevent ratification.

A guard of surprising strength was posted around the area this morning, when the debate was supposed to start. It was delayed by pressure of routine business and put off until 9:30 p. m. (4:30 p. m. EDT).

Additional truckloads of helmeted police and mobile guards arrived to strengthen the guard this evening.

It was expected that the pact would be ratified late Monday night after a two-day debate, with only the Communists voting against it.

Rene Mayer, spokesman for the Assembly's foreign affairs commission, opened debate by reading a commission report favorable to ratification, and emphasizing France's need for American armaments aid.

Denying that the Atlantic pact is aggressive, Mayer said:

"I should like to know how countries such as Belgium, France and Norway, with their feeble armaments, could wage an aggressive war even if they wanted to."

The debate was adjourned at 11:30 p. m. until 9:30 a. m. Saturday.

The government and the Assembly's foreign affairs commission made it clear France expects ratification to be followed by substantial arms aid.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman told the cabinet Wednesday that he was confident American aid would come.

The foreign affairs commission report on ratification said bluntly that by its vote the Assembly would mean that American aid was indispensable for the effectiveness of

Backers Resigned To 10% Funds Cut; Attack Centered on Amendments to Bill

Partial Restoration

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A fight to free the second-year Marshall plan program of five "crippling" restrictions opened in the Senate yesterday but ECA supporters said they were resigned to about a 10 per cent cut in funds for the program.

Instead of restoring the entire slash, they said they will ask the Senate to put back only 74 million dollars trimmed from ECA appropriations for the last quarter of the 1949 fiscal year.

They centered their attack on a string of legislative amendments tied to the bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee, including a plan to force European countries to accept a fixed list of 1½ billion dollars in American surplus farm products.

Under Senate rules, most of the restrictions are subject to points of order barring legislation tied to appropriation bills. Points will be raised against all of the amendments. If they are sustained, the Senate would have to muster a two-thirds majority to pass the amendments.

Two Fight Restrictions

Two Senate friends of ECA, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) agreed to try to wipe out the restrictions as Senate debate opened on the bill.

Vandenberg interrupted a speech by Senator Robertson to say that except for restoring the 74 million dollar slash in last quarter ECA funds, he would not "resist" the cuts recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

"I am perfectly willing to let the arithmetic go to conference," said the Michigan Republican. "The critical issues before the Senate relate to four or five amendments . . . that would seriously cripple the whole enterprise."

Objectionable Amendments

Robertson said he agreed with Vandenberg that ECA supporters should make their fight chiefly again these five amendments:

1. The cut in last-quarter appropriations, after ECA already had made contracts based on legislative assurances that the funds would be provided.

2. The so-called McClellan amendment, requiring ECA to buy farm surpluses of the kind and amount listed in ECA estimates three months ago, whether or not they are now needed by European countries.

3. The McCarran amendment earmarking 50 million dollars for a loan to Spain, and specifying the money may not be used for any other purpose.

4. An amendment barring access

Princess Kidnap Ends Truce of Colombian Tribes

Bogota, Colombia, July 22 (AP).—Brave Tiger kidnaped Moon's Reflection, princess of a rival Indian tribe, and set her tribesmen on the warpath, the newspaper El Liberal said today.

The clashes took place near the Colombian-Venezuelan border in the forested Arauca River Valley, between the towns of Tame Arauca and Arauquita. The fighting shattered a truce between old enemies, the Chiricoas and Regilias tribes. The newspaper gave this account:

The two tribes held a joint three-day celebration after the truce. To mark the happy occasion, the Chiricoas and Regilias drank a lot of mapule—a potent drink made of ripe bananas and palm wine.

Before the hangovers set in, Brave Tiger, son of the Chiricoas chief, kidnaped beautiful Moon's Reflection, daughter of the Regilas' chief.

The Regilias got several other tribes to join them against the Chiricoas.

In the bitter fighting that followed, the Chiricoas were forced to take refuge in the San Camilo Mountains of Venezuela, across the Arauca River. El Liberal didn't say where Brave Tiger and Moon's Reflection are now.

Clash Marks House Hearing On Home Rule

Hildreth and Harris In Dispute on Time Given Measure's Foes

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Melvin D. Hildreth, Democratic National Committeeman for the District, and Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) clashed sharply yesterday over the conduct of House hearings on home rule.

The hearings continue at 10 a. m. Monday.

Harris, chairman of the District Judiciary Subcommittee, was closing the morning hearing with an announcement of next week's session when Hildreth got to his feet.

"Representatives of the District Democratic Central Committee have been sitting here very patiently for days waiting to be heard," said Hildreth. "We are concerned at the vast amount of time being given to the opposition, and our committee has a right to be heard in support of home rule."

"The program has given more time to the proponents than to the opponents," Harris retorted. The gentleman (Hildreth) is in no more privileged position than anyone else, and as soon as this committee gets to you it will hear you.

"We want to end the hearings, but at the same time we want to hear anyone else who wishes to testify. If it is your purpose to sit all year in these hearings, I suppose the committee can sit and listen to you."

Hildreth explained later he was seeking assurance of hearing time for James William Bryan, to present the pro-home-rule statement of the District Democratci Central Committee. He was slated to testify Wednesday, when a House quorum call cut the home-rule hearing short, and again yesterday.

Hildreth's comments came after Representative Sam Hobbs (D., Ala.), through 90 minutes of direct testimony and cross-examination, had opposed the home-rule plan as constitutionally impossible. He said he did not believe it would be constitutional for the residents of the District to elect a city council,

Slots on Piers Evade Law In Virginia

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Colonial Beach, Va., July 22.—Charles County's newly legalized slot machines have stepped with seven-league boots across the Potomac to the Virginia shore, where the machines are banned by law.

The nickel and quarter machines have appeared on piers in this resort area reaching out from Old Dominion land into Maryland waters. It is the newest scratchy irritant that has kept jurisdictional questions between the two States inflamed for 150 years.

On one of the piers here, a 1-inch construction gap and a voluntarily erected State boundary sign proclaim the difference in jurisdiction. They invite Virginia residents to step across the gap and chance their nickels, dimes and quarters.

Furthermore, Mayor Norman Brewington of Colonial Beach said today that the operation appears legal, that he "regrets" it must be in Maryland, and that Virginia would do well to license the machines and get the revenue now going across the Potomac.

Bees With Red, White or Blue Eyes Are Bred

Davis, Calif., July 22 (AP).—Bees with red, white or blue eyes are being bred by University of California researchers.

The project started with some freakish white-eyed drones. With artificial insemination Dr. H. H. Laidlaw bred them to normal black-eyed queens. The first offspring were black-eyed, but through cross-breeding Laidlaw got a generation of white-eyed bees.

Then some red-eyed drones showed up and Laidlaw produced red-eyed offspring in the same way. Finally two drones with bluish eyes appeared and another color scheme was added.

Two Generals Are Named In Hunt Diary

'5 Percenter' Mentions Numerous Officials, Investigators Report

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Two suspended Army generals and "hosts" of other Government officials are mentioned in a diary kept by James V. Hunt, self-styled "management counselor" now in the hands of Senate investigators.

Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.) of the Senate Investigating Subcommittee, described the diary as "pretty complete" and declared that parts of it will be put into the public record when open hearings start in the "5 per center" probe the week after next.

He said both Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the Chemical Corps, and Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman are mentioned in the document.

Both generals were suspended from their posts by Army Secretary Gray as the result of evidence dug up by the Senate subcommittee.

Gray said the facts showed a lack of judgment and discretion on the part of the two in letting information leak to unauthorized persons.

London Dock Workers Vote To End Strike

2 U. S. Longshoremen Union Leaders Are Deported as Reds

London, July 22 (NYHT.).—London dockers voted almost unanimously today to end their 24-day strike and return to work Monday morning. The 11,000 troops, who have been working at the docks, will leave at noon Saturday.

As the dockers voted at a mass meeting, Home Secretary Chuter Ede told Commons he had ordered deported from Britain two American nationals and one Dutch national who arrived here last night by plane from France to interest themselves in the London dock stoppage.

The two Americans, Louis Goldblatt and John Maletta, were deported to Paris by air late today. The Dutchman, Johan F. Blankenzee, will be sent to Holland tonight by boat. All three were described by Ede as having "Communist affiliations." They reportedly were attending a meeting in Paris of the Communist World Federation of Trade Union Dockers International before coming to Britain. Goldblatt is secretary-treasurer of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Unions. His home is San Francisco. Maletta was described as an official of a Seattle local of the ILWU.

The three have now been deported.

The strike was ended when Harry Davis, president of the Canadian Seamen's Union, told the strikers he had called off the strike of seamen aboard two Canadian ships here. The strike grew out of the refusal of dockers to work these struck ships.

His Party Issues Manifesto

Churchill Reported Planning To Appeal for Coalition Rule

London, July 22 (NYHT).—The Conservative Party issued a long manifesto today outlining how it will deal with Britain's problems if it wins the next general election, some time in the next eight months.

Essence of the 20,000-word declaration seemed to be that the Conservatives would pursue virtually the same general policy the Labor Government has followed during the last four years but would do it better and more economically.

Winston Churchill, Conservative leader, will speak on the manifesto at Wolverhampton Saturday.

There have been authoritative reports Churchill may appeal indirectly for a coalition government on grounds Britain's predicament is so acute it requires the support of all parties.

Today's manifesto, entitled "The Right Road for Britain," ranged over every aspect of Britain's life with promises of better things to come. Many were carefully qualified, however. It will be debated and voted on at the Conservatives' annual party conference at London in October.

The document promised to maintain food rationing and price controls on "prime necessities" until supplies are sufficient to put them "within the reach of every family." Controls also would be continued but "progressively reduced" on foreign exchange, allocation of scarce raw materials and imports.

The manifesto blames the high cost (two billion dollars a year) of food subsidies on the Labor government's "mishandling of the food situation" but does not indicate a way to reduce costs.

On the numerous social reforms of the Labor government, the manifesto asserts the Conservatives claim original responsibility for many of them. R. A. Butler, principal author of the pamphlet, told reporters today: "The welfare state is as much our creation as the Socialists.'"

Throughout the document, there is a steady succession of promises to slash "waste and extravagance" in government and to revive industrial and personal freedom and incentive. Butler, however, said: "We will not return to laissez faire or the law of the jungle."

Butler quoted this passage as the main theme of Conservative policy: "Wherever modern life

By N. S. Haseltine

Little Michael Rector has another 4-year-old rival in Washington for courage in the pain of severe burns.

He is Tommy Morrison, son of a Statesville, N. C., physician, who has been a plucky patient at Children's Hospital here since early in March.

Like Michael, Tommy was severely burned in his own flaming clothes. And like the now-famous Casualty Hospital patient, Tommy has amazed physicians by surviving.

Tommy, according to his mother, Mrs. J. Rudy Morrison, was almost fatally burned last October 31, Hallowe'en night, when he plucked the candle from a jack-o-lantern in the family home. A play grass skirt he was wearing over his sister's Martha Washington costume flared up and set his clothing ablaze.

Dr. Morrison and the mother smothered the fire in a throw rug. The boy, his pain immediately eased with morphine, was taken to Davis Hospital, in Statesville.

Tommy lost his left arm to amputation above the elbow there when gas gangrene, the hazard of severe burns, set in. He later battled his way through a siege of pneumonia, and it wasn't till

After Ouster of 3 Officials

Shortage of $12,000 Is Found In AFL Teamster Local Here

A shortage of $12,000 has been found in the treasury of Local 639, AFL Teamsters, it was disclosed yesterday by Charles Bell, special representative of the international union.

Bell was appointed president to run the affairs of the 3000-member local here in April after international headquarters had deposed three elected officers on the grounds of "inefficiency and negligence." He said yesterday that he believed the shortage would run to a higher figure when all the members' cards had been checked for dues stamps.

Last night, Bell refused to comment on the question whether or not the shortage was in any way connected with the dismissal of the three officers of the local last April 20. They were Aubrey Stream, president, Eddie Finch, treasurer and Arthur Morris, recording secretary. The three, while deposed from office, were not discharged from the union. Linwood Trainham, business agent, survived the shakeup, which was initiated by the complaints of individual union members to the international.

Bell, who is the business agent for the meat truck drivers, was once before, in 1937, assigned to running the affairs of Local 639, when a shortage in the account books was discovered. He stayed on with the local until 1942.

British Offer Evidence

10 Million Russians Held In Forced Labor, U. N. Told

Geneva, Switzerland, July 22 (AP).—The British government today expressed belief 10 million persons, a tenth of Russia's working population, are in Soviet forced-labor camps. It said it had documentary proof forced labor is the approved legal policy of the Soviet Union.

The British delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council made public a set of documents which he described as Soviet laws and regulations on forced labor policy.

The delegate, Corley Smith, announced that Britain will demand a U. N. commission investigate the camps in the Soviet Union. If Russia will agree, he said, Britain will permit such a commission to go to any British colonial territory to look into Russian charges of forced labor.

The documents deal with regulations for deportation to forced labor colonies of "unstable elements among the workers," degrees of punishment for such persons and various other regulations and laws concerning "corrective labor."

Smith said the collection is "so fantastic that if we didn't have this photostatic copy, you couldn't believe it."

The documents are entitled: "Corrective Labor Codex of the Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic."

The "Codex" sets forth that this is a basic proposition:

"The task of the penal policy of the proletariat during the period of transition from Capitalism to Socialism is the defense of the dictatorship of the proletariat and the Socialist construction being carried out by it against the encroachments by class-hostile elements and infringements not only on the part of the declasse ele-

Arnold Names Fenwick as 'Pressure' Man

Remmie L. Arnold last night named Virginia State Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington as the Democratic "machine" man who tried to pressure him out of the Virginia gubernatorial race.

Fenwick, Arnold said, came down to Petersburg last April and told him, "We want to elect you Lieutenant Governor. Will you please get out of the race? We want to make you Lieutenant Governor."

Speaking over Alexandria radio station WPIK, and to about 40 persons in the Alexandria recreation center, the Petersburg fountain pen manufacturer said he refused to yield then and since to similar "pressure."

To Name Others

Arnold has been threatening to reveal the names of prominent "Byrd men"—members of the State Democratic organization under Senator Harry F. Byrd's leadership—who have tried to divert him from a try for the Governor's seat.

He said last night that he would name others besides Fenwick—perhaps on a State-wide radio hookup from Richmond tonight.

Arnold emphatically denounced the sales tax or any other increase in taxes to solve Virginia's school problems. His solution would be, he said, to distribute the State surplus to individual communities to build up the schools.

He accused Governor Tuck of using the surplus funds to gain supporters for the organization-supported candidate, Senator John S. Battle.

Unfitness Proved, He Says

Battle, Arnold said, proved his unfittness when, as chairman of the State Senate Finance Committee, he allowed Virginia schools to deteriorate into their present "terrible" condition.

His other rivals for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination were also unfit, Arnold said. Horace H. Edwards, who is for the sales tax, Arnold added, "is too expensive," and Francis Pickens Miller "is too liberal."

At the conclusion of the radio address, Arnold was handed an announcement which, he said, was a telephone call from Senator Byrd, presumably about the revelation of Fenwick as the "pressure" man. "Maybe Senator Byrd has a better offer," Arnold mused, although it was not made clear whether such a call was actually received.

Neither Senator Byrd nor Senator Fenwick was immediately available for comment last night.

GI With 2 Wives Mentally Okay, Says Walter Reed

Anthony V. Martino, the GI who was blown from a foxhole in France during World War II and "awakened" five years later to find himself with two wives—and multiple troubles—was discharged from Walter Reed Hospital yesterday as mentally competent.

Martino, under observation in the neuropsychiatric service at Walter Reed since June 8, will be returned immediately to his station at Fort Jay, N. Y., it was announced.

Walter Reed said all of its medical findings on Martino have been forwarded to headquarters at Fort Jay.

So it will be up to a board of officers at Fort Jay to decide what to do about the years he was absent.

Martino, who is 40, had been working as a Staten Island, N. Y., cab driver before May 6, when he reported himself alive to the Army, and officers held he had returned technically to the ranks.

Presumed dead by the Army, he said his mind went blank in combat in France in 1944, and the next time he remembered himself he was on a Brooklyn street some months later.

After that, he settled down with a blonde sweetheart of army training days, Dorothy, 33, by whom he has a son, now 3. He said he would be loyal to her, and has no wish to return to a prewar wife, Mary, and their two children, in Waterbury, Conn. The first wife has said she will seek a legal separation.

If the experiments are successful WMAR-TV expects to transmit surgical and allied techniques from Johns Hopkins Hospital for the benefit of American Medical Association sessions to be held in Washington late this year.

Miller Says Byrd Group Instills Fear

Leesburg, Va., July 22 (Spl.).—Francis Pickens Miller, one of four aspirants for Democratic nomination as Governor of Virginia, ripped into the "Byrd machine" in two speeches here tonight.

In a radio broadcast to Loudoun County residents, he blasted the State organization for "creating fears in the hearts of many people."

"Over a whole generation," Miller said, "the Byrd machine has been responsible for running Virginia. It is responsible for our poor schools, the disappearance of local government, and for creating fear in the hearts of many people in Courthouse towns.

Handwriting On The Wall

"I have found that people are a little afraid to express their opinions for fear of persecution and reprisals. But the handwriting is on the wall. The Byrd machine has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Judgment day is August 2 (date of Democratic primary)."

Later, in a speech to about 300 on the Courthouse lawn, he became more specific. He attacked as a "political slush fund" $7,500,000 released by Governor Tuck last week for State hospitals and colleges.

"I heartily approve of the purpose of the action," said Miller, but I deprecate its timing, coming as it does on the eve of an election."

Compensation Board Hit

He attacked also the State Compensation Board which sets salaries of State officials and its chairman, who he said is the real boss of the "Byrd machine."

The board's chairman, now E. R. Combs, violates the State Constitution, Miller said, by receiving salaries for two State positions, as chairman of the board and as clerk of the Senate.

Miller reviewed also his program to bolster the school system and to "return local government to the elected representatives of the people."

Urges Reorganization

The nub of Miller's school program is that the State should pay most of the teachers' salaries, leaving the counties free to build schools. He estimated this would cost the State about 20 million dollars a year which, he said, could be obtained from surplus State funds without a sales tax.

Miller also called for a "complete reorganization of county government." He said local control almost has disappeared in the counties. He pointed particularly to schools which are controlled by boards appointed indirectly by local courts.

ments but also of unstable elements among the workers."

("Declasse elements" would be those people who have lost their standing in a society.)

One document says "solitary confinement cells for persons under investigation, deportation points, corrective-labor colonies (factory colonies, agricultural colonies of mass labor and punitive colonies), medical institutes and institutions for minors" are places where citizens may be confined.

Persons who "manifest systematic insubordination to the established regimen or labor discipline" may be sent to punitive labor colonies, with women permitted to take their children up to the age of 4 years, the document says.

The documents say forced labor is under supervision of the Internal Affairs Ministry, which also controls the secret police.

Edwards Hits Battle Over Sales Tax

Wise Courthouse, Va., July 22 (Spl.).—Sheer ignorance or deliberate misrepresentation was charged tonight against John S. Battle, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Virginia, by Horace H. Edwards, one of his three opponents.

In a statement issued here, Edwards replied to Battle's attacks on the Edwards proposal for a sales tax to finance school improvements. The statement was part of developments which included announcement of support from the Rockingham County Board of Supervisors at Harrisonburg, regarded as a political stronghold of Battle supporter Senator Harry F. Byrd.

Edwards in his declaration, referred to Battle's charge that administration of a sales tax would cost two million dollars a year, or 25 per cent of receipts.

Edwards pointed out that Battle has been chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in the Virginia Assembly and that he is unworthy of that job if he believes his own statement.

Edwards charged Battle must know that studies by the League of Virginia Counties and the Richmond Times-Dispatch have shown costs of administering sales tax in adjoining States have averaged about 2 per cent. He said Battle knows West Virginia does the job For 1 per cent and Battle's home State of North Carolina for 2 per cent.

In a speech here on the same topic, Edwards charged that if his opponents keep their promises to improve the State school system without a sales tax, then they will impose a bonded debt on the Commonwealth which farmers will have to pay through many years.

At Harrisonburg, George Conrad, Commonwealth attorney and manager for Edwards, said the Rockingham County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously today to indorse Edwards' candidacy.

This, Conrad pointed out, is in the Seventh District, home of both Senator Byrd and Senator Willis Robertson, as well as the home of Representative Burr P. Harrison, who has actively supported Battle.

Edward P. Philips, general campaign chairman for Edwards, said this is particularly significant because it is in the heart of an area supposedly strongly in favor of the Byrd machine and its candidates.

Bujak and his 820 fellow passengers were welcomed by Gov. Paul A. Dever, Mayor James M. Curley of Boston and Chairman Ugo Carusi of the United States Displaced Persons Commission.

Ex-Red Says Soviets Tried to Get Agents Into U. S. Jobs

By The Associated Press

Testimony of a former Red that the Soviet secret police 20 years ago began trying to sneak agents into State Department jobs was made public yesterday by House investigators.

Paul Crouch, who told of 17 active years in the Communist Party, gave the testimony to the House Un-American Activities Committee in May. The committee released part of it yesterday, but withheld some "for the time being in the interest of national security."

Now a mechanical department employe of the Miami Daily News, Crouch identified dozens of former associates as Communists—people all over the country, in schools, unions, business and other occupations.

He told of going to Moscow to consult "top officials of the Red Army General Staff and of getting orders for infiltrating Communists into the American Army.

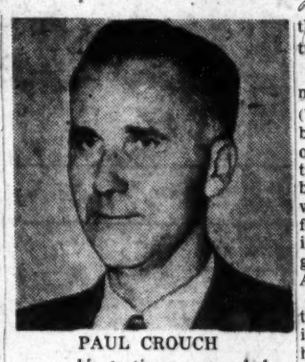
Later, he said, he was active in trying to infiltrate the radiation laboratory and "all scientific research at the University of California."

Some of his testimony had leaked out before and some covered things Crouch had included in a series of published articles.

He said he was a Communist from 1925 to 1942 and got out when he came to realize he and other Reds were "victims of a gigantic fraud."

It was in 1929, Crouch said, that he was let in on plans of the Russian secret police to plant people in the State Department and other Government agencies.

He said he was told by a Nicholas Dozenberg that "the heads of the OGPU (secret police) in the United States wished to see me." Crouch said Dozenberg at one time was national organizational secretary of the Communist Party, but dropped out of official party work to take on a confidential assignment for the OGPU.



PAUL CROUCH
. . . his testimony revealed.

"With the greatest precautions, and in roundabout ways," Crouch related, "I was escorted by Dozenberg to a fashionable West Side apartment near Central Park, in New York, where I was introduced to a tall Russian who spoke broken English.

"This, Mr. Dozenberg said, was the head of the OGPU in this country.

"The Russian was interested primarily in the question of any YCL (Young Communist League) members in the State Department or other branches of the Government, the possibilities of placing members in such jobs, urging that all with any possibility should apply for Government jobs in Washington, and he also indicated the greatest interest in obtaining blank American passport books.

"I told him we were not in position to supply them. He asked that, if we were at any time, to contact him through Dozenberg."

Crouch told the committee about a person he said joined the party after holding "very high positions in the Government." The testimony went on:

Refers to Dean's Son

"Before entering the Communist Party he was assistant to (name deleted) as (——) administrator and held various other positions of trust. He has many friends among Government officials from whom, if he is still in the party, he might be able to obtain information of importance to national defense."

He said he doesn't know whether this person still is a Red.

Asked to identify some of the people involved in infiltration attempts at the University of California, where part of the atom bomb project was handled, Crouch mentioned Kenneth May. He said May is the son of a university dean and was a member of the Communist Party.

Passengers, also unhurt, included: Corp. Clyde D. Painter, R.F.D. 1, Box 65, Troutville, Va.

Confessions of a Spy for RUSSIA

In Section II
In Sunday's Post

Why Henry Julian Wadleigh, minister's son and Oxford graduate, chose to betray his country

On June 16, Henry Julian Wadleigh, former State Department economist, told the Alger Hiss jury that in the mid-1930's he turned over U. S. secret documents to Whittaker Chambers and another member of a Soviet spy ring.

How did this trusted public servant—son of an Episcopal rector who put honesty and integrity above all—come to commit treachery? How did his background—his education at Oxford, the London School of Economics and the University of Chicago—operate to make him an underground agent?

Julian Wadleigh will tell you himself, in a series of articles beginning in Sunday's Post. He will tell how he passed State Department papers to the "apparatus" so cunningly that they were never out of the building during office hours. He will tell of his "contact," Harold, who became jealous when another contact, now know as Whittaker Chambers, entered the picture.

It's an absorbing and bizarre story Wadleigh writes of his career as a spy. A separate article this Sunday will tell you what he is doing today, where and how he lives, and about his family. Don't miss any of it.

Ouch! Here Comes That D. C. Sales Tax

Only seven more shopping days before Washingtonians start paying out those extra pennies for purchases. There's more to the sales tax than you might think, too—so Sunday's Post brings you the first article in a series explaining the plan. What will be taxable and how the merchant will be responsible is outlined in down-to-earth terms, with helpful diagrams. Follow The Post's D. C. sales tax preview, starting Sunday.

At Last They've Pinned Down Silver Spring

Maryland's second-biggest city has finally had its boundaries defined—the people in the Silver Spring area now know where they reside. To mark the occasion, Post real estate editor, Conrad Harness, profiles this bustling community in a special Sunday story. He writes of the many new housing developments built there in the last two years. And especially for the prospective home buyer, he answers questions that might arise about Silver Spring's transportation, schools and tax rate. A big Board of Trade map will show the boundaries, plus location of the major subdivisions.

All This and "Father of the Bride" Too

Are you following Edward Streeter's rib-tickling best-seller, currently running in condensed form? Sunday's Post brings you the further adventures of bedeviled Stanley Banks. In tomorrow's installment Mr. Banks becomes increasingly overwhelmed by the stupendousness of the spectacle he is about to produce (and finance). But bravely he assures family and friends he's not at all nervous about daughter Kay's wedding to young Buckley. You'll like Sunday's companion story, too—the true "father of the bride" experience of Emmet O'Neal, former American Ambassador to the Philippine Islands.

Canada's Atomic Reactor Held Best

Los Angeles, July 22 (AP).—A top-drawer American atomic official said tonight Canada has the world's most advanced atomic "reactor."

A reactor is a device for the controlled release of atomic energy, as distinguished from a bomb in which the energy released produces an explosion.

Without making any reference to current discussions concerning American-British-Canadian relation in the atomic energy field, Dr. Lawrence R. Hafstad, director of reactor development for the United States Atomic Energy Commission, said:

"The reactor of most advanced design and performance is in Canada."

He said that for various reasons "no really new or greatly improved versions of reactors have been built" in the United States since the war's end. But he said the Atomic Energy Commission has now embarked on a new program of reactor development.

Does Not Elaborate

Hafstad, in an address prepared for delivery before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, did not elaborate on his statement about the Canadian device.

But a reporter obtained this information from the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington:

Canada's reactor is located at Chaulk River, Ontario. It is a "research reactor" designed to produce isotopes (radioactive materials)) for research and also to test the action of atomic radiations on various materials.

It's a faster-working reactor than those so far produced in this country in that it generates more neutrons in a given unit of time in a given unit of area. Neutrons are subatomic particles, or atomic "bullets," which "split" atoms and keep a chain reaction going in a pile of uranium.

No information was available as to how Canada's reactor compares with American reactors in size. The size of our reactors has not been disclosed. The Canadian "pile" was built after comparable reactors at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and at Chicago were made.

The Canadian reactor employs "heavy water" as a moderator to promote the action of the neutrons generated in the pile. This is the same moderator employed in the American reactor at Argonne national laboratory in Chicago.

Discussing America's latest plans in the field of reactors—designed to seek propulsion for sea and aircraft, electrical power for practical use, and the "breeding" of precious atomic fuels—Hafstad said:

Huge Type at Hanford

"Of course, the Nation has had reactors of various kinds from almost the beginning of its atomic energy program. . . . A series of reactors was built during the war culminating in the huge single purpose productions reactors at Hanford."

(At Hanford, Wash., the AEC produces plutonium which, like uranium-235, can be used to make bombs.)

"Other reactors," Hafstad said, "have since been built but these are, by and large, research type of reactors, small in size, and none of them capable of producing useful power in appreciable amounts.

"The next phase in the historic development of reactors calls for designing and constructing of reactors which are larger, more complicated, and more difficult to build than any we have produced thus far.

"As in any new technical development, there are many uncertainties and many risks involved. It is here that the experts disagree on details of designs of reactors which will do the jobs that need to be done."

Weird Trip To Mars Seen Soon

San Antonio, Tex., July 22 (U.P.).—The time is not "too distant" when man will be able to take a trip to Mars and other planets, researchers in the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine reported today.

And what an adventure it will be!

You will be able to swim around in gravity-free space; you won't be able to tell whether a man is upside down or not; eating and drinking will require special tools; and you'll sleep in a semicircular bed.

Dr. Hubertus Strughold of the school's staff said, "Only perhaps half a ton of oxygen would be necessary for each man on a trip to Mars and back. In fact, by just increasing the oxygen content a trifle in the air originally pumped into the interior of the ship, that air would be healthy for breathing for several weeks."

Appearance Deceiving

Dr. Heinz Haber explained that "in gravity-free space, the body will be exactly as light as the surrounding air in the ship. Thus, swimming movements will propel the crewmen through the air exactly as the movements of a fin move a fish through water.

"Appearances alone will not tell a man that he is upside down—in relation to the ship, of course, for there is no 'upside-down' in space."

Bodily activities will slow down because of less demand on them, the result of weightlessness, and Strughold observed that "crew members will probably have to force themselves to exercise with something like tension springs, just to keep their muscles from atrophying."

It will be impossible to drink from a cup or through a straw, and dining will require special clamps instead of spoons and forks. Uncontained, the liquid or food would be thrown to the ceiling simply by lifting movement.

Pressure Suit Necessary

The bed will be a semicircular trough—covered with strong netting or straps to keep the crewmen from floating away every time he turns over in his sleep.

Forced ventilation systems will be necessary, if for no other reason than to blow away the breath. Otherwise, expired air would remain in front of the spaceman's face, posing the danger of asphyxiation.

On Mars, the spaceman must wear a pressure suit, carry a portable oxygen supply and perhaps a portable heating system.

The gravity of Mars is a third that of the earth, which would seem oppressively heavy at first by contrast with the weightlessness of space, but "once the crewman got used to the new gravity, he would have no trouble carrying the cumbersome equipment he would need," said the Air Force's report. It foresaw only a low form of animal life to be encountered on Mars, if, indeed, any.

Benefits Called Great

Brig. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, commandant of the school, pointed out that "space flight will make demands that are possibly beyond human tolerance. Space craft must essentially be adapted for the crews that will man them. Space medicine has the job of determining, as far as possible, what conditions men will meet and what requirements the engineers must fulfill."

Its results, said Drs. Haber and Strughold, the "scientific return alone would be incalculable. Samples brought back to earth would provide possibly even a new era for geologists, biologists, astronomers, meteorologists. Knowledge would be increased a thousandfold. The possibilities for research and application would be literally without limit."

From space, they said, weather processes could be followed from beginning to end and weather forecasting would be practically infallible.

Farmers Would Be Helped

"The profits to agriculture alone in one year as a result of absolute weather forecasting would amount to many times all the expenses involved in creating and maintaining space ships as, say, earth satellites."

And until space is conquered, their findings will not be a loss, for plans are on the boards now for planes to fly at 100,000 feet and perhaps travel from New York to Paris in less than an hour.

Tried to Stop Bleeding, Says Fernandez

New York, July 22 (AP).—Raymond Fernandez today admitted he placed a scarf around the neck of Mrs. Janet Fay, lonely hearts slaying victim, and "pulled it as tight as I could."

Fernandez swore his lover and codefendant, Mrs. Martha Beck, 29, killed Mrs. Fay while he was in the bathroom. Fernandez said he pulled the scarf to stop the flow of blood from head wounds.

Fernandez, 34, declared he would go to the electric chair to save his plump codefendant and that he still loves Mrs. Beck.

U. N. Fall Agenda Has 60 Items, Mostly Old

Lake Success, July 22 (NYHT).—A 60-item provisional agenda for the fourth regular session of the General Assembly of the United Nations, which will open September 20 at Flushing Meadow, Queens, was released today.

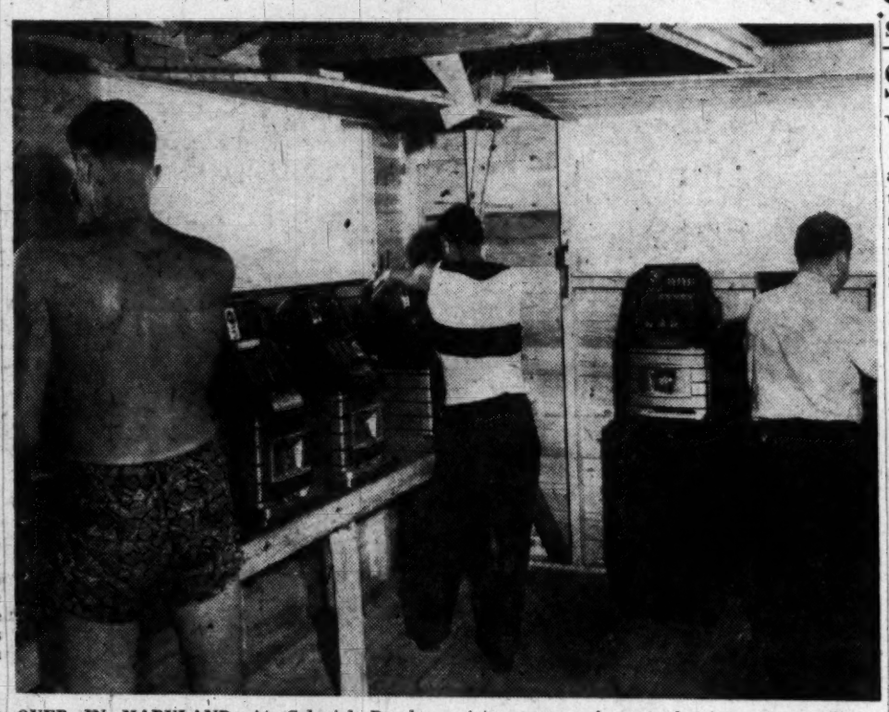
Most of the items were echoes from the past.

10 U. S. Soldiers Die Violently in Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, July 22 (AP).—Ten American soldiers died violent deaths in Germany last week.

Five were killed in vehicle accidents, one by an accidental gun shot, two by trains, and two drowned, Army casualty reports showed today. (None was from the Washington Area.)

Slots on Potomac Piers Evade Virginia Law



OVER IN MARYLAND—At Colonial Beach, Va., but a few yards out on a pier in Maryland waters, three men play slot machines. This picture was made yesterday in a pier pavilion housing 14 slot machines. The pavilion was built last week attorney for Westmoreland County, said his hands apparently are tied. He said that in 1944 Abram P. Staples, then Attorney General and now a member of the Virginia Supreme Court, wrote an opinion.

In it he declared that the Maryland border reaches the low-water mark on the Virginia shore. Riverward from that mark, the opinion said, Maryland has jurisdiction.

Ralph W. Millen, proprietor of the New Atlanta Hotel at Colonial Beach, built a pier about 100 yards into the Potomac. Wednesday, 14 slot machines, licensed by Charles County, Md., went into operation in a small structure on the end of the pier.

Miller, a former member of the City Council here, said he consulted two attorneys and Mayor Brewington before building. He does not operate the machines himself. License for them was issued by Patrick C. Mudd, Charles County, Md., clerk for the Circuit Court there. It is made out to Amos L. Jenkins.

The Charles County slot machine law, voted at a referendum June 21, provides licensees must be voters or property owners of that county. Mudd said yesterday that Jenkins is a registered voter in the Maryland county. Millen said Jenkins is living in Colonial Beach, at least for the summer.

For the 14 machines, a summer license costs $90 each for the first 10 machines and $45 each for those in excess of that number, a total of $1080 in this case.

Millen pays Virginia only real estate and personal property taxes. He pays a $20 license fee for the New Atlanta Club, a place where members may keep bottles of liquor and have drinks served.

Sale of liquor by the drink is banned by law in Virginia. If interference comes, Millen said, he will move the New Atlanta Club onto the pier.

Mudd said that a license was issued to Milton L. Hutch, a resident and voter in Waldorf, Md., for slot machines at Fairview Beach.

Jerry Sonnenberg, operator of that place, said he has 10 machines in a dance hall at the end of a pier. He said he sells beer there under a Maryland license, but attempts to adhere to Virginia closing-hour regulations. He said he has sold beer there under a Maryland license since 1933.

Mudd said no application has been received for slot machines at Muse Beach, but that a Maryland liquor license has been in effect there.

No Comment In Maryland

Miss Dorothy Posey, La Plata, Md., who was Charles County Ration Board chairman during the war, lent weight to the Maryland side of the jurisdictional question today.

She said that during the war both Fairview Beach and Muse Beach were under jurisdiction of the Charles County Ration Board, and not the Virginia ones. She said she did not believe the New Atlanta obtained ration coupons at that time.

Charles County law enforcement officials were not available for comment on how they intend to police their "offshore" slot machine operations, about 7 miles across open water from the Charles County mainland.

One county official said that last year, Virginia authorities complained to Charles County that a slot machine was operating on an overwater construction in Maryland territory.

10 Heavily Armed Troopers Guard 5 Robbery Suspects

Leonardtown, Md., July 22 (Spl.).—Ten heavily armed State troopers, some carrying submachine guns, guarded five suspected safe burglars during their arraignment here today to prevent any attempt to deliver them.

The five, arrested Tuesday after the $4250 burglary of a general store at Tall Timbers, in St. Marys County, were held under $20,000 bond each for the grand jury. An extra $1000 bond was set on two of them because they had guns when captured by an elaborate police trap. All are charged with statutory burglary and larceny.

An extra guard of five armed troopers was set on the jail here last night by Lieut. W. H. Weber, Maryland State Police field commander, following a tip that a jail delivery might be attempted by a Washington gang, friends of the captives.

With three regular members of the staff of Sheriff J. L. Long, on duty inside the new jail building, they kept a night-long vigil.

Lieutenant Weber said that though no attempt at a delivery developed, he will maintain a special trooper guard as long as he deems it necessary.

"I'm still not too confident there was anything to the tip," he said, "but it was too important to be overlooked. There will be special men at the jail until I am convinced there is no need for them."

The five prisoners are John P. Byars, 30, and Edward P. Wickline, 30, of Hyattsville; Martin Freedman, 24; his wife, Louise, 30, and Charles G. Bafford, 42, of Baltimore.

Film Palooka Pays Up as Twins' Dad

Worcester, Mass., July 22 (AP).—The "ideal American boy," hero of the Joe Palooka movies, today was judged the father of twin sons born to a pretty unwed movie cashier after an alleged summer romance seven years ago.

R. Joseph Kirkwood, jr., 28, rugged, blond movie star, was ruled the father of twin boys born April 19, 1943, to Miss Florence C. Heppenstall, 27, Worcester theater cashier.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

. . . in a 1942 photograph.

Despite protests about not paying a penny from Kirkwood and his lawyer, the District Court and Miss Heppenstall's counsel declared that a support settlement was made for the twins.

There was no testimony. District Judge Walter D. Allen conferred privately with counsel for both sides in his lobby.

Miss Heppenstall—seven years ago a waitress at a summer inn in Jefferson, N. H.—was not present for the verdict.

Her counsel, Mrs. Maybelle Fellows Murphy, said Florence—then 21—met Joe in New Hampshire when he took her riding "constantly" in a "snappy pale blue roadster."

The girl's head was turned by "professions of love" from the tall handsome actor and professional golfer, Mrs. Murphy said.

"She had no money to follow him out of the State," Mrs. Murphy said. "She told him she thought she was pregnant before they separated that summer. He promised to write but he never did."

Mrs. Murphy said a lump sum cash settlement which was "satisfactory" was made. Joe denied the charge

Virginia Hotbed

Virginia's four-way gubernatorial race which culminates in the Democratic primary on August 2 promises to arouse the Old Dominion from its traditional political lethargy. For the first time the domination of the Byrd machine is seriously threatened. This threat arises from the fact that two of the candidates have been intimately associated with the machine, although Senator Byrd has come out on behalf of State Senator John S. Battle. But the candidacy of Horace Edwards, former Mayor of Richmond and lately State Democratic chairman, undoubtedly will split the machine vote and thus increase the chance of the principal challenger, Col. Francis Pickens Miller. Meanwhile the fourth candidate, Remmie Arnold, has enlivened the race with charges that Byrd henchmen tried to buy him off with a promise of the next senatorial nomination if he would withdraw.

Generally the main struggle is thought to be between Battle and Miller. Mr. Battle's tack has been one of standpatism, defending the record of the State administration and indorsing the politically safe proposal for better schools. Senator Byrd has waded in to support Battle with the charge that Colonel Miller is "the CIO candidate," a label which Miller has rejected. Miller, who has the support of liberal and independent elements, has denounced machine control and promised to return government to the people. He has made a particularly telling attack on the State Compensation Board, the unique Byrd creation under control of the Governor which fixes the salaries of all county officials as a means of keeping them in line politically. Edwards has sought to present himself as a moderate acceptable to both camps. He has had the courage to come out flatly for a sales tax and has been asking the other candidates where they will get the money for the improvements they demand. Arnold's support is thought to center largely around Petersburg.

The X in the equation will be the size of the vote. In 1945 only 168,000 persons, or 7.8 per cent of the residents over 21, voted in the Democratic primary where the real decision is made. Counting county personnel and school teachers, there are nearly 60,000 State employes in Virginia, and these constitute the hard core of machine support. Obviously the machine is worried, however, and the interest which the free-for-all has stirred may have the salutary effect of making the gubernatorial nomination no longer the sure thing it has been hitherto.

Mixed Feelings

House rejection of a modified version of the Brannan farm program, which provided (among other things) for a trial run of his proposed production payments system, effectually kills that plan for the time being. The Washington Post has opposed the Brannan plan on the ground that the high support prices applicable to storable commodities would encourage overproduction and necessitate a high degree of agricultural regimentation, while the contemplated production payments would introduce a system of subsidies, the cost and consequences of which would be incalculable.

As Representative Monroney said during the House debate, "When we accept the Brannan program we accept the principle of food subsidies, of high producers' prices, and the Government making up the difference out of money from the Federal Treasury. If we can accomplish this trick without the outpouring of billions of dollars from the United States Treasury, then we have discovered something as great as the discovery of perpetual motion." He also warned the House that adoption of a trial subsidy system limited to three commodities would be an entering wedge for the kind of full blown program originally proposed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Washington Post had hoped that the sidetracking of the Brannan program would clear the way for the introduction of the flexible system of price supports provided for under the Hope-Aiken Act. Unfortunately, as a substitute for the Administration bill embodying the principles of the Brannan plan, the House approved a one-year extension of the present defective price support law, with its rigid and obsolete parity price support systems and its inadequate control measures and voted for outright repeal of the Hope-Aiken Act. From present indications the Senate will follow the House lead, with the result that the Department of Agriculture will continue to carry on under a price support system that puts a premium on overproduction at a time when farm surpluses are piling up, with resultant heavy and increasing outlays by the Government.

Republicans and Democrats in the House are united in opposition to lower support prices, adjusted with reference to changes in supply. Consequently the outlook for constructive, permanent legislation at the next session to take the place of the cast-aside Hope-Aiken Act is distinctly gloomy. Possibly when Congress is forced to consider the cost and the economic consequences of retention of the existing system, it will experience a change of heart. But for the time being most members of Congress appear to be chiefly concerned about the political rather than the economic effect of legislation affecting farm prices.

Full Surrender

The recriminations over the Allied surrender formula for Germany uttered in yesterday's House of Commons debate were as unseemly as they were unprofitable. Foreign Minister Bevin, who has never been distinguished either for tact or for subtlety, went so far on this occasion as to assert that "nearly all the difficulties arising in remodeling Germany" were due to the late President Roosevelt's demand for Germany's unconditional surrender. Winston Churchill's somewhat equivocal rejoinder to this was that although he had concurred in the demand for the sake of Allied unity he had not approved of it but that it had not, in his opinion, aggravated the German problem.

The unconditional surrender formula was indeed enunciated independently by Mr. Roosevelt at Casablanca. He failed to consult not only Mr. Churchill but also even his own military and political advisers. Whether or not it prolonged German resistance remains debatable. Maj. Gen. J. R. C. Fuller, a noted military analyst, thinks it did; the British historian, H. R. Trevor-Roper, flatly disagrees. And there is much respectable opinion on either side. There were, in any case, considerations supporting Mr. Roosevelt's declaration too readily lost sight of today. It reassured the Russians that we would not make a negotiated peace with Germany. It reassured the resistance movements in the occupied countries, which had been profoundly shocked but a short while before by the deal with Darlan in North Africa, that we would not do business with any of Hitler's heirs disguised as anti-Nazis. It made it impossible for any future fuehrers to tell the German people, as Hitler told them about Woodrow Wilson's fourteen points, that they were tricked into surrender.

As for the difficulties in Germany today, they are certainly of complex origin. One might irrefutably add to the recrimination by arguing that area bombing, a form of warfare instituted and advocated by the British, gravely aggravated the task of German reconstruction. And there are those, General Fuller for example, who insist that this form of strategic bombing was not only not strategic but not even effectual. But perhaps it is more important to remember that Germany was, in fact, defeated and that the Allied coalition remained steadfastly cemented at least until that great event occurred. If there were enough mistakes made to assure every participating leader a share of blame, there was also an abundance of credit and glory.

The root of the German problem today is, of course, the disruption of the Allied coalition and the schism between East and West. There could be no easy or speedy German rehabilitation once the Russians embarked upon their policy of rule or ruin in Germany. There can be no comfortable road to economic recovery or security for the whole Western world so long as the threat of Russian expansion and aggression continues. If Britain's pugnacious Foreign Minister would concentrate on these realities instead of attempting to deal with them by alibis and buck-passing, the great task of Western cooperation might be simplified.

Goal Of Air Power

Mr. Stuart Barber's communication on the opposite page is one of the most provocative and persuasive discussions of the meaning of air power that we have encountered. Essentially his plea is for a determination by the National Security Council of the objectives this country should seek to accomplish in war. Is the objective to spread mass destruction, obliterate cities and leave an enemy prostrate? Or is it to concentrate on knocking out communications or a few key industries on which the enemy's war potential depends without inviting the creation of the same kind of millstone which was caused by the indiscriminate devastation in Germany? How much emphasis should be placed on psychological warfare? These are political decisions which must precede an effective military war plan. For without them, the miltary cannot know in other than a general way what may be expected of it, and fighting over the relative prominence of strategic bombing in the war plan is tantamount to quibbling over details.

Mr. Barber also makes good sense when he argues that air might must be assessed on the basis not of heavy bombers or carrier fighters as such, but of the totality of the forces available. We place relatively more importance than Mr. Barber on the assignment of roles and missions, for they are essential in dividing responsibility and preventing duplication. But certainly the objective of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in drawing up a war plan should be to make the best combined use of all air power, wherever it resides.

We quarrel with Mr. Barber, however, when he accuses this newspaper of promoting the form rather than the substance of unification. The two are equally important and go hand in hand. For without the economies and straightened channels of authority to make decisions effective, the best laid plans become mired. Nor can we agree that there is danger in reducing the military representation on the National Security Council. The danger in the present unbalanced council is that not enough of the non-military factors in war will be considered; and with competent work at subordinate levels in the Defense Department, one military member of the council ought to be sufficient to present the military's views.

Economic Power

Adolf A. Berle, former Assistant Secretary of State, warned a House Judiciary Subcommittee that is currently investigating problems of monopoly that failure to curb huge concentrations of economic power leads to socialism. This is the considered judgment of a man who had acquired an enviable reputation as a student of corporate law and finance before he entered Government service and who is now earning his living as a corporation lawyer. Mr. Berle does not belong to that group of extremists who regard every concentration of economic power as a menace to free enterprise. Nor does he belong to that other extreme group who rally to the defense of every large business organization that runs afoul of the antitrust laws. He recognizes that big as well as small businesses are an integral part of the American system of free enterprise. However, Mr. Berle thinks that the Government should determine whether there is a point beyond which bigness becomes dangerous and if so, decide what percentage of total business in any industry can safely be left to a single company. He also suggests that a responsible agency be set up to regulate industries requiring a higher degree of concentration than would otherwise be safe, and urges adherence to consistent policies in dealing with industry.

This program, to be sure, hinges on a definition of bigness in terms of bureaucratic judgment that might invite the kind of criticism that Government agencies now encounter in trying to enforce antitrust laws. Moreover, it is doubtful whether the line between harmless and harmful bigness can be determined with reference to any percentage formula. Nevertheless Mr. Berle's proposals contribute to straight-thinking about the aims of regulation by emphasizing the fact that at some point business expansion ought to be arrested in the public interest unless the expanding company is prepared to submit to regulatory restrictions of the sort to which public utilities have long been subjected.

Mr. Berle's analysis of the sources of capital for expansion purposes was also illuminating. He pointed out that a predominant proportion of capital and credit available for financing industrial expansion since 1919 has come largely from retained business earnings, and bank credit, most of which has gone into big business. It is the large concerns, too, that have access to the securities markets through sales of bond and stock issues. Thus big corporations inevitably grow bigger at the expense of new, small enterprises, while the competitive handicaps of small business are aggravated by the inadequacy of the capital available for their use.

Tightening the antitrust laws will not provide the solution of this financing problem. However, a liberalization of the tax laws, to encourage investment of risk capital in smaller enterprises, such as Mr. Berle suggests, would help. Or it might become necessary for the Government to enter this field of financing, as proposed in the Murray Economic Expansion Act of 1949, through provision for insured loans in case funds are not otherwise available.

Above all else there is need for a definitive statement of general policy that will give businessmen a clear idea of what the Government is seeking to achieve by suits brought under the antitrust laws. The heads of many large businesses are, as Mr. Berle says, "groping in the dark" at present. They "need a statement of policy to guide them in the exercise of their responsibilities," as well as protection against shifts of policy that leave them vulnerable to legal attack.

Destroyers Of Sleep

Many Americans will echo with variations President Truman's desire to get his hands on the fellow who kept calling for Chloe into the small hours of the night before his departure from Chicago. The President made no mention of the hotel band that played until 3 a. m. or the band that performed in the streets in celebration of the Shriners' diamond jubilee. But to thousands of his fellow sufferers those sounds must have been as destructive of slumber as the voice of the solitary caroler.

The noise-creating diversions of midnight and early morning revelers, to say nothing of low flying airplanes and the rattle of city traffic, have become a problem for city heads and police officials to grapple with. But the noise-making of the celebrants of social, political, and even business organizations appears to be licensed by public consent or at least weary acquiescence. We see no reason for such tolerance. On the contrary, we think that convention groups should be made aware of their obligation to the people whose hospitality they are enjoying and that responsible officials or leaders of such groups should cooperate with hotel managements and police officials in efforts to suppress boisterousness.

"Frank Murphy"

It has all too often been claimed that humanitarian principles can only be asserted at the ultimate expense of law and order. Your July 20 editorial on the late Mr. Justice Murphy would indicate that The Washington Post has fallen victim to this misconception of the function of the law in a free society. Such is the unmistakable import of the regrettable statement that a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States ought not to attempt a "reconciliation" of his humanitarian principles with his judicial office.

This point of view, apart from its seeming insistence on what amounts to a self-imposed moral corruption of the judiciary, is clearly based on the faulty premise that "legal principles," handed down from some heavenly realm of juridical concepts derive their justification and reason for being in a source apart from all ethical conceptions of right and justice.

The memory of Mr. Justice Murphy will serve ever to remind us that justice need not be tempered either with mercy or morality, but that it springs directly from them both.

HOWARD M. SCHOTT.

Your editorial showed a sad misconception of his person, his work on the court and of the role the Supreme Court played during his tenure. One would easily agree with you that a crusader is misplaced on the court if its function were judicial mainly. There are hardly more than a handful of decisions rendered by the court in all these years, in which a deep penetration in philosophy and economics would not have overshadowed the legal considerations. "Aquabatics"

Having come to believe that The Washington Post can be depended upon to take a liberal position with regard to most issues, I have been considerably surprised at the opinion voiced on your editorial pages concerning the segregated swimming pool dispute.

The Washington Post, when it states (on July 18) that "a number of years of educational preparation" are required before the citizens of the District will accept nonsegregated pools, is beginning to sound like the voice of the District Recreation Board. Just who is going to undertake this education process, when, and in what way?

Granted that the situation, because of its awkward handling, has thus far worked out unsatisfactorily. Suppose that the Interior Department should now notify the public, through the media of newspapers, radio, television, and movies, that henceforward all pools will be unrestricted; that swimmers will be expected to cooperate; that nonconformists will be dealt with according to law? Perhaps then the disturbers of the peace will be persuaded to stay at home and swim in their segregated bathtubs. M. TURNER

"Planes and Music"

Your July 19 editorial, "Planes and Music," probably raised a chuckle in quite a few people, notably airline pilots who were among those present during the battles of the airports back in 1937 and 1938. Back in those days I was one of those who, in civic-mindedness, fought hard to have the airport situated on the tract that is now Andrews Field. We who opposed the Gravelly Point location pointed out the inevitability of the very thing of which you now complain, just as one of the many disadvantages of having a major airport too close to the heart of the city.

It is not on record that any Washington newspaper supported the Camp Springs airport project as it was debated for about two years. It is on record that some Washington papers fought the Camp Springs bills vigorously. All of the civic clubs fought it, and most of them, as well as the newspapers, were hell-bent on having the airport just where it is now. The CAA advised the President to work it out in that way.

Now you are stuck with your own proposition, and there is no way that you can have an airport right at your doorstep and still have quiet. Your proposition of an understanding between Watergate Concert people and airport authorities so as to work out a way of having planes avoid coming in over the concert area during concerts is highly impractical, for no pilot is going to give a tinker's damn about concerts when a safe approach with a plane load of passengers is the order of business—and he shouldn't, and the air traffic authorities shouldn't. The real solution is: get a site farther out. BENJAMIN KING

Default Judgments

The ruling, made Monday in Small Claims Court by Judge Milton S. Kronheim, jr., denying the recovery of court costs in small claims suits, and the publicity in the press which was given to the ruling did not explain the facts.

In the session in Judge Kronheim's court the debtors did not appear in 34 cases and judgments by default were rendered in our favor in each, but allowance of costs was denied in all but one case. It is my opinion that the judge's ruling was not justified and was based on an erroneous assumption that the date of last payment appearing in the suit papers was the date when the debt was contracted. An effort was made to clarify this for the judge but apparently had no effect. The additional records necessary to prove the facts asserted by me will be produced in court next week.

We file suit only as a last resort, after there has been a clear default in payment and the debtor by his conduct indicates no intention to pay.

Unrealistic Quaker Peace Plan

The proposals made to the State Department by the American Quakers in an atttempt to relieve the threat of a "hot war" are based upon an assumption that is characteristic of Quaker philosophy: That the events that have led up to the "cold war" are the results of a misunderstanding between Russia and the U. S. A., rather than the products of Soviet intransigence in the pursuit of its announced goal of world communism.

The Quaker proposals are admirably designed for the settlement of a misunderstanding. Unfortunately, however, their assumption of a misunderstanding has yet to receive any substantive or sincere support from Soviet actions.

The first proposal seeks to pave the way toward good relations by a program of gifts to the Soviet people. (Streptomycin has already been sent them by the Friends.) Past Soviet official reaction to American gifts, such as wartime lend-lease, however, has been to hide or distort the source of such goods when they are shown the Russian people.

Next, it is suggested that cultural relations between the two countries be fostered as an aid toward understanding. Yet, the Soviet government has consistently subverted or reduced to a bare minimum the normal facilities designed to promote cultural relations.

The Soviets have failed to support UNESCO; they have caused the termination of consular facilities between themselves and the United States; they have restricted the distribution of the State Department's highly popular magazine America; and they have refused to enter in student exchange programs with this country. In short, there is no dearth of evidence to demonstrate that the Kremlin has worked tooth and nail to shield its people from an accurate knowledge of the United States and its way of life.

Finally, in its three-point program issued today, the Friends advocate such measures as can only weaken the position that our foreign policy has achieved with such difficulty.

Free trade with eastern Europe and the economic unity of Germany will undeniably work to the economic advantage of the hard-pressed Iron Curtain countries. However, this would at the same time deprive us of our only positive means for demonstrating to those people the ineptitude of their collectivist economy—the failure of collectivism to supply food and consumer goods when not supported by capitalist resources and markets. Oppression of the human appetites of less politically enlightened peoples breeds revolution faster than does the oppression of their minds.

The removal of occupation troops from a unified and "neutralized" Germany would apparently present no problem of a recrudescent fascism. However, this does not consider the force of Soviet trained and orientated East German police. With this pro-Soviet agency in the resulting German vacuum, it is difficult to imagine how Germany could remain politically independent.

The proposal anent the atomic bomb, although it carried the headlines, warrants little consideration. The Russians were offered and sneered at the generous Baruch plan.

Although the sincerity of the Friends' proposals cannot be doubted, their approach to the problem has yet another dangerous facet. The inevitable refusal by the United States of several unacceptable points of the program can only result in more distorted grist for the Soviet propaganda mills.

Growing Lure Of Paychecks

By Malvina Lindsay

Alger Boys' Quest

WITHIN THE HAZY legions of the country's unemployed are two large groups for which social change rather than the economic cycle is responsible. One is the great number of married women, especially older ones, who need or want regular paychecks. Another is the ever-growing army of boys and girls who need or want to work after school and during vacation.

A census check last month showed 87,000 women between 55 and 65 years of age and 19,000 65 or over seeking work. This is end product of a long-term trend that was stepped up by the war. What is not so generally recognized is that boys and girls of high school age also got the paycheck "bug" during the war. Now they want to keep on earning money in vacation to keep themselves in school, help out at home or to spend on dates and clothes. Also an increasing number wants to work outside of school hours.

The effect of youth on the labor market is shown by the fact that there are now about 1,100,000 young people either looking for their first post-graduation job or seeking vacation work. About two million teen-agers work the year around. Hence the Labor Department has started a new program aimed at bettering employment opportunities and investigating working conditions for persons under 18.

Those who fear that modern youth is becoming soft and lazy will be heartened to learn that about four times as many boys and girls of high school age are working outside of school hours today as before the war. Also there is a growing trend among high school and college students from middle and higher income homes to "take a job" during the summer.

IN FACT it is becoming so "smart" to work, even in "trade" that some well-to-do parents boast of their daughters' successes as baby sitters or as department store saleswomen, and of their sons' skill at mixing sodas or rounding up patrons for power-operated lawn mowers.

This influx of youth into the labor market for work during vacation and outside of school hours is attributed by the Census Bureau largely to the big market for services that the business boom developed. War needs also gave encouragement to youthful industry. In addition, the move of population away from the farm—where boys and girls always have plenty to do in vacation and after school—has put more youths into the market for part-time jobs.

A new attitude also is developing in this country toward the relation of work and schooling. However, this now creates the necessity of finding jobs in a tightening labor market for the growing multitudes of boys and girls ambitious to earn their own money.

Many educators believe high school students need to get more knowledge of the business world before they are abruptly plunged into it after graduation. There is great "lack of communication between business and the schools," says the Vocational Advisory Service of New York. And often students who extend their horizons by taking summer jobs bring much of value back to their college or high school life.

AMERICAN PARENTS are prone to feel that industry and initiative should be encouraged in their children. Possibly the American zeal for work—on which visiting German editors recently commented—contributed to youthful job seeking. But in many cases summer work is a necessity for the boy or girl who hopes to continue in high school or college.

While in upper-income families nearly all children finish high school, yet only 60 per cent in middle-income and 30 per cent in lower-income families do so. Either financial aid for education or more part-time opportunities for work will have to be provided if high school and college education are to become more general.

High school and college boys and girls should not be burdened with heavy work schedules outside of school hours. But their efforts to get vacation jobs are laudable and in many cases necessary. College students especially need this financial help and realistic experience. But the inexperienced youth who wants a temporary job is often down near the bottom in the labor market.

This is a problem primarily for communities to meet. They can do much in creating part-time jobs and chores that will keep their youth occupied and make them feel useful. The first step is to recognize that city boys and girls do not have the chances to work and earn that many of their rural-reared parents did, and that if the Alger boy spirit is to be preserved in American life, more thought must be given to providing them the equivalent of farm opportunities.

Sick Society

When virtually the entire globe was engaged in mass-killing and industry occupied in manufacturing implements of war, including atomic bombs, the Fire Department of the National Capital was summoned to release a bird, which had become entangled in overhead wires.

It is gratifying to know that the desire to aid the stricken, including birds, still exists. Nevertheless, future historians, centuries hence, may well record that a so-called civilization, that takes the time to aid a helpless bird, while indulging in universal mass-slaughter in futile attempts to establish four freedoms, was irresponsible, and incredibly stupid.

A Communication

What Do We Want From Air Power?

By Stuart B. Barber

ADMIRAL YARNELL'S letter in your issue of July 15 serves to focus attention on why the national defense of the United States is the subject of incredible and dangerous confusion and bickering.

To begin at the end of the admiral's letter, he states: "There is no dominant arm in warfare. All are equally essential." With all due respect to the distinguished former commander in chief of the fleet, I submit that this statement is nonsense, and that its constant reiteration by Navy spokesmen has done the Navy—and our national security—more harm than all the machinations in the Air Force.

Aviation constitutes the dominant arm in warfare—in any kind of warfare. To deny this is not only to deny the painfully self-evident facts of World War II, but to forfeit the respect of a public which is, on this point at least, admirably well informed. For as the Strategic Bombing Survey so succinctly stated, control of the air was essential to the success of every military operation, air, land and sea.

TO SAY that aviation is the dominant arm is not to say that ground surface, and subsurface forces are not essential. They are. Nor is it to say that they must be mere auxiliaries to the air arm. They must not be. On appropriate occasion they must contribute to the national objective as primary combat forces in their own right, to which, on such occasions, the air arm will be the auxiliary. But let there be no lack of repetition: considering war as a whole, the air arm is and must be dominant.

To say that aviation is dominant is not to say that the Air Force must dominate. For American air power consists of all planes which can contribute to the primary purpose of controlling the air and to using that control, over land or sea, be they Air Force, Navy or Marine. The Air Force would have us make the simple identification: Air power equals Air Force. Our obsolescent cruiser admirals amiably assist them by insisting that naval aviation is merely a part of sea power, and not air power at all.

Naval aviation, to be sure, does help to control the sea, but its airmen can tell you that their job, first and foremost, like that of any other airmen, is to defeat the enemy air force—or be driven from both air and sea. One can be sure that enemy air leaders, in calculating their opposition, do not fail to include the planes of the Navy and Marines. Let us be as wise as they and think of our air power as a whole, however for convenience of operation it may be divided.

TO SAY that aviation is dominant is not to say that we must build our military strength around the B-36, or around any other single weapon or single narrow concept of air warfare. Air power is far broader and more versatile a force than its multiple brands of specialists know, or would have us believe. It is not unreasonable to say that its greatest enemies are those bomber fanatics, or fighter enthusiasts, who, with all too little understanding of air power as a whole or faith in its broad potentials, would limit its development to the narrow sphere which they do understand.

For air power is not bombing alone, nor destruction alone. It comprises that total array of military missions, proven and potential, constructive as well as destructive, which can be accomplished through control of the air power to do, as the essential preliminary to determining what our air power shall be, and with it what our total power shall be.

It is impossible to comprehend the means of American victory in war against a major power except through major reliance on strategic air attack. It is possible, however, to inquire into the means, the objectives, the timing and the byproducts of such attack. It is essential to inquire what else we must do besides strategic air attack, and to support that attack and to follow through to inquire whether our present total air power is properly balanced and properly developed to do those things which we must do at the start of a war, if we are to accomplish maximum results with minimum expense, waste and danger.

IN MAKING such inquiries we should forget for the time the old arguments of which service shall have what roles and missions, and what weapons to carry them out. If we can determine the necessary shape of our national air power considered as a whole, for all the tasks which American interests require to be done, it will become relatively simple to dispose the pieces of this air power among the services in accordance with standards of combat as well as dollar efficiency.

As Admiral Yarnell so correctly points out, it is not possible to determine what the shape of our air power, or our military power as a whole shall be, until there is agreement on "the war plan and its objective." On this, he says, the three services, must agree.

Here, I believe, we come to the heart of the controversy. We cannot decide the nature of our military forces without a war plan. But we cannot construct a war plan for the military without first having a statement of the objectives of the United States in case of war, and of the political and economic war plans with which the military war plan must be meshed, which it must support, and by which its nature and objectives must be limited.

This latter statement neither the armed services nor the Joint Chiefs of Staff can write. The day has passed when the armed forces unilaterally determined objective and plan of war. Admiral Yarnell has missed the point: the services cannot write a sound war plan until they are given an objective and a framework from above. There is ample public evidence that the military plan of today is built around terror bombing and bears little relation to our political plans and objectives. The fault for this must be hung squarely on the members of the National Security Council, individually and collectively. For there, and not in the JCS, is the responsibility for writing the basic war policy of the United States.

IN WAR we shall oppose a power capable of gaining control of the vast areas and populations of Europe and Asia. These areas and populations contain resources which we need, and which we must at any event keep from being productively used by the enemy power. That power is a political power operating in the realm of ideas as well as a military power.

Immediately we come to questions which the military cannot answer. To what extent shall we combat those ideas by bombs, and to what extent by political means? To what extent shall we hold or occupy those areas and populations with our own troops, and to what extent by political means?

How shall we conclude a war and restore peace? By destruction and indefinite occupation, or by somehow encouraging the formation of nonhostile governments from the populations of each area, which can maintain order and restore productivity with minimum cost to us? To what extent, to accomplish these things, must we limit the potential destructiveness of our weapons, and guide them into channels of greatest political advantage?

These questions have neither been answered nor faced. Because they have not been, the Joint Chiefs argue interminably about what, in the end analysis, are opposing views of political objectives rather than military methods of attaining a prescribed set of objectives. Each service tries to keep alive a full set of weapons adequate for all possible tasks because the exact tasks to be accomplished have not been defined.

Meanwhile, impatient advocates of economy and efficiency bellow and cast their weight about, demanding the abolition of this, that, or the other force, or its merger and disappearance into something else. If they succeed, they will narrow the range of what we could do in war, and inevitably limit our eventual choice of objectives and strategy. But they will be doing this through the back door, and not on the basis of a well constructed, positive plan for using the total resources, political as well as military, of the United States to accomplish its basic objectives in war.

THERE IS more than a little suspicion that those who clamor so loudly for "unification" on the service level, do so to cover their inability to face and solve the problem of unification at the level of policy and strategy, on the national plane.

For this vacuum of national strategic planning, few members of the National Security Council can be held blameless. Ultimate responsibility is of course the President's, as its head. But the Secretary of Defense should certainly be somewhat curious as to what objectives his department must prepare to accomplish—unless he intends to decide these himself. And should not the Secretary of State be somewhat apprehensive of whether certain professed military objectives might make political and psychological warfare, and the reestablishment of peace, impossible?

The Air Force, of course, finds the policy vacuum most pleasant; its quasi-official minions can continue to sell the panacea of city-bombing without regard to its effect on political warfare. Why then has not the Navy raised the question of our objectives and overall strategy in war, and insisted that the Security Council bring it to decision?

Here, I think, we complete the circle. Aside from any question of their leadership and courage, the Navy's surface-minded leaders cannot propose to the National Security Council an alternative basic concept for fully accomplishing the national objectives in war. They cannot do this because they do not understand, or are unwilling to admit, that the dominant force in war must be aviation.

They continue to talk of "occupying the enemy nation." They appear to have no conception of the potentialities of strategic air warfare in its broadest sense—as distinguished from the narrow one-way street of city bombing. They talk of strategic and tactical aviation—just as do the heavy bomber fanatics—as though they were two different things instead of merely two different ways of applying the same weapons and forces.

They will not let the Navy's aviators—who are airmen first and seamen second—discuss what American air power should be, as the balanced whole needed to carry out specific national policies, and apart from any squabble over the roles and missions of specific services. The Navy thus serves to perpetuate, instead of to initiate, the reform of an American defensive system swollen at both ends and weak in the middle.

Now is the time for military statesmen. They need not be airmen, but they must understand the dominance of air, the great potential variety and flexibility of air weapons—and their dependence upon surface as well. They must understand also the relations between military and political force in opposing a power which has both. They will not be found among the bomber, fighter or submarine fanatics, but wherever they may be found it is time the services let them come to the top, to lead our thinking for a while until these issues can be clarified.

Meanwhile, astute political thinking, and courage, and some willingness to admit previous error, are also required if we are to survive. The Washington Post might lead this parade by admitting that its insistence on putting the form of service unification ahead of the substance of unification of national policy, is putting the cart before the horse.

It might also withdraw its proposal that the three service representatives be removed from the National Security Council. Now, if ever, we need the fullest, broadest presentation to the council of the varying alternatives which we could adopt, rather than a determination by one man whose breadth of vision and capacity for sober reflection are, shall we say, as yet unproved. Beyond this, it is up to the vision and courage of the members of the council, if they would truly serve their country.

Soviet Asserts Vatican Works For the West

London, July 22 (U.P.).—Russia today fired its first big blast at the Vatican decree excommunicating Communists in the form of a broadcast saying the propaganda machinery of the Catholic Church had been put at the service of American and British reactionaries in the cold war.

Why, the broadcast asked, did not the Pope excommunicate "those who publicly call for a new war, for dropping atomic bombs?"

The broadcast was a commentary by Boris Isakov, foreign expert for Pravda, the Moscow Communist paper, and was distributed here by the Soviet monitor.

Czechs Set to Export Own Type of Catholicism

Prague, July 22 (AP).—Czechoslovak Communists defying excommunication tonight said they will export "progressive Catholicism" to other countries.

The Government-sponsored separatist Catholic Action Movement asserted tonight it had the power to enter into "international relations with progressive Catholics" in other countries.

Leftist Catholic Priest Disciplined in France

Paris, July 22 (NYHT).—Abbe Jean Boulier, active in Communist-front organizations, today was publicly disciplined for his extreme left views and associations. He is the first Roman Catholic priest to be cited in this way since the Vatican excommunication edict against Communists.

The abbe will not be allowed to say mass in the Paris diocese after September 14, unless he previously has reconsidered his actions and associations.

Reds Rushing Force for Vital China Battle

Hong Kong, July 22 (U.P.).—At least 150,000 Communist soldiers are rushing south from Shanghai to reinforce Red armies in the climactic battle for South China, the Nationalist air force reported today.

An air force communique said powerful Communist columns were marching toward the Changsha-Kanhsien area, where the decisive battles of the Chinese war may be taking shape even now.

Government reports from the battlefront said two main Communist drives were developing—a thrust westward from Nanchang toward Changsha and Hengyang, about 300 miles west-northwest of Canton, and an attack down both banks of the Kan River toward Kanhsien.

(The Communist New China News Agency reported in Shanghai that the Reds were closing an east-west "pincer" attack on Changsha, near Liuyang, 45 miles east of the city. Changsha is the capital of Hunan Province, the Chinese "rice bowl.")

British army planners here believed the Communist advance might reach Hong Kong by September. It was reported reliably today that the Honk Kong garrison of 8000 had been tripled. A 600-bed hospital was already being prepared to care for "the sick and possible wounded."

Lucky Leaves Town After Huge Welcome

Lercara Friddi, Sicily, July 22 (U.P.).—Charles (Lucky) Luciano skipped out today on the little town which had just given him a hero's welcome home. His whereabouts were unknown.

Lucky stayed here just long enough to get official permission to leave.

Grist For The '50 Campaigns

THE FAINT stirrings on the surface fail to reflect what is happening in the political depths. Intensive reparations are going forward for what promises to be a showdown contest in the congressional elections next year.

Childs

The issue for conservatives, it becomes increasingly apparent, is whether organized labor in a unified front is to establish a balance of political power. On the side of the Labor-Fair Deal-Left the issue is whether Congress can frustrate the Truman welfare program that was the core of the President's 1948 campaign.

On both sides of this dividing line the feeling grows that '50 is crucial. And if the conservatives, most of whom are in the Republican Party, recapture control of Congress next year, then 1952 becomes the all-important year in which to consolidate a victory that many Republicans feel should have been cinched last fall.

Two current developments point up the all-out stress on winning in next year's showdown. In the center ring will be the contest in Ohio with Senator Robert A. Taft up for reelection and organized labor determined to knock him out.

A CHALLENGER of proper stature to take on Taft becomes, therefore, of paramount importance. This is the reason that tremendous pressure is being put on a man who has hitherto had virtually no professional political experience. Murray Lincoln, a leader in the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and president of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A., is being urged by labor groups, by cooperatives and by such organizations as Americans for Democratic Action to make the race against Taft.

According to Lincoln's friends he would like to run but he is hesitating because of his inexperience and because he knows what a grueling, no-holds-barred contest it will be. Lincoln has promised to give his answer at the end of August.

The search for a candidate became acute when Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio took himself out of the running. A possibility is State Auditor Joseph Ferguson, who has proved through the years to be a phenomenal vote-getter.

But for such a contest in the national spotlight Ferguson lacks the symbol value. That is just what Lincoln, in the view of those urging him to make the race, has in overflowing measure. As a dirt farmer, as a leader in the cooperative movement and as proven friend of organized labor, he embodies the farmer-labor coalition which is the goal of the strategists in the Fair Deal-Labor side.

The fact that Lincoln has been registered as a Republican and so lists his political affiliation in Who's Who makes no difference to the enthusiastic backers pleading with him to run. That reflects the growing indifference to the old political labels as the emergence of new political divisions becomes increasingly clear.

THE SECOND development relates to 1952 and the Republican search for a candidate who can win. Aware of the more and more frequent mention of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as GOP standard-bearer for '52—a phenomenon that is repeating in a fascinating way the Eisenhower boom of early 1948—a group of influential Republicans called on the general not long ago.

They told him they were convinced he could get the nomination and win the Presidency. This did not surprise Eisenhower. A great many politicians—both Republicans and Democrats—have been telling him that since he stepped out of the Chief of Staff's office.

What did surprise him was the next statement of the spokesman for the group. He told the general that an absolute requisite, if he were to be the victorious candidate, was that he say just as little as possible about the controversial issues of the day. Get yourself elected and then we can work to reverse the trend toward the welfare state, so the advice went.

Eisenhower replied that this advice seemed to him contrary to the basic principles of democracy. It was saying, in effect, that the people should not be allowed to determine what was in their own best interest; that if they voted for something those at the top believed wrong or harmful, then that policy should be nullified. Eisenhower made it clear he would continue when he felt called to do so to express his convictions.

The only relations these two developments have is that both men, Lincoln and Eisenhower, are outside the field of traditional politics. The effort to use them is one more indication of the increasing urgency behind the issues in the coming contest.

Holtzoff Denies Meyers' Plea To Vacate His Prison Sentence

Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court refused yesterday to vacate the prison term of 20 months to five years given Bennett E. Meyers for subornation of perjury.

The jurist ruled that no injustice had been given Meyers, former Army Air Force major general convicted of inducing the dummy president of Aviation Electric Co. to lie to a Senate war investigation committee in 1947 about Meyers' ownership of the firm.

Meyers challenged the conviction under a recent 5-4 decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Christoffel case, which held it was perjury to give testimony in such cases only when there was a quorum of the committee present. It was up to the jury, not the trial judge, to decide that question, the court said.

Judge Holtzoff said he was bound by the Supreme Court decision which "reversed what the legal profession believed to be the law." However, he distinguished the two cases by saying the evidence in Meyers' case showed a quorum of the committee was present. The defense did not contravert this evidence, the judge said.

Even if this were not so, he said, the court could not consider the issue on a motion to vacate sentence because the question neither went to the jurisdiction of the court nor was it such a violation of civil rights as to deprive the defendant of his constitutional right to a fair trial.

The Supreme Court had refused to review the Meyers case although it later agreed to consider the Christoffel conviction which it reversed.

Congress Gets Arms Aid Plan On Monday

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

President Truman on Monday will send to Congress the Administration's $1,450,000,000 arms aid program to help back up the North Atlantic Treaty and this Nation's security.

Originally scheduled to go to Capitol Hill yesterday, the President's message was postponed at the request of Senate leaders, the White House announced.

As previously planned, the arms bill would have been dropped into the congressional hopper less than 24 hours after the Senate voted approval of the 12-nation North Atlantic Pact by an overwhelming 82-to-13 margin.

The three-day delay in submitting the arms program in no way marks a weakening of Administration pressure for passage of the program at this session, however.

Vice President Barkley, after attending a Cabinet meeting yesterday, expressed belief that debate on the arms program will require less time than that spent on the treaty, despite far stronger opposition to the arms legislation.

Asked if he thinks it can be passed by September 1, he replied, "I fervently hope so. I see no reason why we can't."

Connally Allows 2 Weeks

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who steered the treaty through the Senate, fully agreed with Barkley.

Connally said he feels the arms debate will not require more than two weeks.

The Senate spent over 2½ weeks in debating the treaty, which needed a two-thirds vote for approval, while the arms bill—requiring action by both House and Senate—needs only a majority vote.

The arms proposals would authorize $1,130,000,000 to bolster the military defenses of western European members of the Atlantic Pact, and the 320 million dollars would be earmarked for such other nations as Greece, Turkey, Korea, Iran and the Philippines.

Kee to Introduce House Bill

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) is expected to introduce the arms bill in the House immediately after the President's message is read on Monday.

Senator Connally probably will introduce the bill in the Senate, although the House hearings are expected to get under way first.

The Administration hopes that Senate hearings can begin a few days later, to meet the tight time schedule, although Connally said, "we plan to let the House take the lead on this program."

A bitter battle over the bill is expected in both Houses of Congress, and the Administration is expected to throw its full strength into the fight.

Apparently in recognition of the large vote piled up by the Administration for the treaty, Senator Kennth S. Wherry, Republican floor leader and an opponent of the treaty, conceded that "some kind of arms program" will be passed.

While Wherry declared he would lead floor action to prevent atomic weapons from being sent overseas under the bill, those familiar with the program said that it clearly states it does not amend the Atomic Energy Act and also specifies that no atomic weapons will be involved.

Prompt Action After Passage

Plans have been made to place the program in effect immediately after congressional approval, even though the Defense Council called for under the treaty probably will not be set up before several months.

While this may be used as an argument against the program, those sponsoring it maintain that the contemplated arms aid is suitable for any type of strategic concept for defense against aggression.

At least half of the weapons, ships, guns, aircraft, etc., involved would be delivered in the first year of the program, it is believed.

The legislation contains authority for immediate contract authorizations up to 155 million dollars to be made through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, without waiting for appropriations.

It also provides for 155 million dollars in raw materials for Western European nations to manufacture into capital goods for defense.

In addition to the overall $1,400,000,000 program cost, it was learned that the legislation would authorize an additional 100 million dollars to be "loaned" for procurement assistance to "friendly" countries able to pay for their defense needs.

This might include such nations as Canada, or countries in Latin America which have had difficulty in placing orders here for certain types of weapons.

Six Bidders Offer U. S. Office Space

Six bids to supply 100,000 square feet of office space needed here by the General Services Administration were opened yesterday by the Public Buildings Administration.

Decision on the bids is expected in about 10 days. The space is needed for administration of the new Public Housing Law and compilation of the 1950 census.

These were the bids:

Steuart Bros., Inc., 1012 5th st. nw., submitted no formal proposal but offered to construct a building and lease it to the Government.

La Salle Hotel Apartment, Inc., offered to lease in the La Salle Building, Connecticut ave. and L st. nw., 30,000 square feet of office space and 16,000 square feet of basement space at $2.85 rental per square foot.

John O'Donnell representing the City Club Building, 1320 G st. nw., offered to rent the entire building except for the first floor: 39,000 square feet of office space and 2000 square feet of basement at a rental of $1.15 per square foot.

Johnston, Lemon & Co., brokers, Southern Building, 15th and H sts. nw., offered 124,000 square feet at a yearly rental of 95 cents. The location was withheld at the brokers' request.

Charles C. Koones & Co., brokers, Southern Building offered 38,265 square feet of office space and 28,000 square feet of basement space at 73 cents a square foot. This location was also withheld at the request of the brokers.

Kass Realty Co., Connecticut ave., offered to rent a building at 1436 and 1438 U st. nw., containing 37,835 square feet of space, at slightly over $1 a square foot.

Some in D. C. Owe U. S. and Local Taxes

A substantial number of District residents owing Federal income taxes also are in arrears in local taxes, District Tax Collector Guy Pearson said yesterday.

The local tax office is making a careful study of tax returns of residents against whom Federal tax lien notices have been filed in District Court, he said.

In many cases the District already has liens against the property of these delinquent taxpayers.

Priority will go to the District which filed first if a court judgment is obtained on these liens, Pearson said.

If both District and Federal taxes are in arrears and the District has not already filed a lien, the local government will wait until the Federal lien has been cleared, the tax collector said.

The District, he said, files several thousand liens a year.

Senate Group Doubles Funds To Hospitals

Heeding President Truman's request, the Senate Labor Committee yesterday approved a bill to provide 150 million dollars a year in Federal aid to States for hospital construction. That is twice the present allotment.

The provision for doubling Federal aid is part of the Administration's health bill, which includes the President's controversial health insurance program.

The committee is considering that measure on a piece-by-piece basis. The hospital-construction section was cleared unanimously.

The measure now goes to the Senate. There has been no House action on it.

The bill authorizes the 150 million dollars annually for five years.

Stockpiling For Defense Cut Further

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday slashed another 275 million dollars from the defense budget—cutting back the stockpiling program by that amount.

It told the Munitions Board, which handles the scarce-materials reserve, to "buy American" whenever possible.

The cutback leaves 560 million dollars in cash and contract authority available for purchase of strategic materials this year.

Materials Listed

They include such things as copper, lead, zinc, rubber, quinine, pepper and industrial diamonds—materials not produced in sufficient quantities in the United States and which would be hard or impossible to import in time of war.

The entire cut comes from a 520 million dollar contract authority previously voted by Congress. An accompanying cash appropriation of 315 million dollars approved at the same time was untouched.

The action was a compromise. Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Armed Services Appropriations Subcommittee wanted to rescind 635 million dollars of the previously passed 835 million dollars for stockpiling.

Thomas said the committee first voted to cut the fund 335 million dollars, and it carried by a narrow margin. Then the 275 million dollars was submitted "in order to get nearly unanimous support," he added.

The Oklahoman declared the "Buy American" amendment was written in because the Munitions Board has been purchasing Canadian copper while domestic mines have been closing for lack of markets. The foreign price was lower.

Foreign Buying Not Barred

Under the amendment, Thomas said, foreign buying is not barred nor are Munitions Board chiefs given any special instructions. They are simply charged with buying here where possible at reasonable prices.

The 275 million dollars cut is in addition to a $1,118,000,000 slash in defense funds voted by the group last week. An amendment will be offered to the $14,782,000,000 military appropriation bill on the Senate floor making the further slash.

Senate Group Votes to Keep 52-20 Benefits

The Senate Labor Committee yesterday voted unanimously to keep for another year the "52-20" program of unemployment benefits to veterans.

The present program expires next Monday. President Truman has asked that it be continued.

Under the program, unemployed veterans receive Government payments up to $20 a week for 52 weeks. About 600,000 veterans now are getting them.

The committee's action sends on to the Senate a bill that would keep the program in force. Both Senate and House must approve it for the program to continue.

Backers of a similar measure in the House are pessimistic about extension of the law. The bill is before the House Veterans Committee. The chairman, Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) has said it is going to stay there. He has called the "52-20" benefits "sit-down money and rocking chair money."

15 Boys Go To Albright Camp Today

Today and the next three Saturdays will be camping days for 15 teen-age boys from Albright Memorial Church, 4th and Rittenhouse sts. nw.

At 9:15 a. m. the boys will board a church-owned truck for Camp Scharfwood, near Rockville, Md., to enjoy a day of living in the outdoors.

On each of the Saturdays the boys will participate in a program of camp craft, outdoor cookery, and recreational activities. Then, on the last week-end, they plan to have a full-fledged overnight hike.

A staff of four men, headed by William Strasser, 19, 608 Aspen st. nw., will supervise the campers. Stasser, a Maryland University student, is a member of Albright Church.

The camp, which was given to Albright by a church member several years ago, consists of more than 20 acres of woods and picnic grounds with a stream running through the land.

Church members have worked at developing the area, and it is used for picnics, hayrides, and camping trips by boys and girls and adults.

During the spring and summer evening vesper services are sometimes held at the camp in an outdoor chapel.

The Rev. George E. Schnabel is pastor of Albright Church.

Typhus Reported

Lake Success, N. Y., July 22 (AP).—The World Health Organization today reported an outbreak of Louse-borne typhus epidemic in Afghanistan and called on its regional office in Washington to rush shipments of vaccines and DDT to the stricken area.

school operating expenses including teachers' salaries.

The Barden bil' is similar in most respects, but it provides that the money can go only to public schools and it rules out school bus, health and welfare activities. In some States these latter are made available to private and parochial school students.

On June 19, the Cardinal attacked Barden in a speech here as a "new apostle of bigotry" who had written "Un-American and anti-Catholic" legislation.

Barden replied with a denial that his bill discriminated against any group.

"We wanted the funds for paying teachers and buying equipment and books," he said. "If we start doling out transportation money, we would be writing checks for Methodist orphanages, Baptist schools and all the others."

The organization, Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, jumped into the dispute with a statement that Federal funds for parochial schools would violate the first constitutional amendment by "discrimination is favor of a particular religious group."

On July 15, Mrs. Roosevelt said in her column she had received many letters on the subject, some of them indicating the writers believed she was biased against the Catholic Church.

She Explains Stand

She wrote that she had not indorsed the Barden bill in its details or any other measure, but said she still was firmly opposed to "aid from the taxpayers' money to any but public schools."

"I believe," she added, "that all children should have an equal opportunity for education in whatever community they live, and this holds good for the whole of the United States."

Text of Cardinal's Letter

The text of Cardinal Spellman's letter to Mrs. Roosevelt follows:

"Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

"When, on June 23d in your column My Day, you aligned yourself with the author and other proponents of the Barden bill and condemned me for defending Catholic children against those who would deny them their constitutional rights of equality with other American children, you could have acted only from misinformation, ignorance or prejudice, not from knowledge and understanding! It is apparent that you did not take the time to read my address delivered at Fordham University; and, in your column of July 15th you admitted that you did not even carefully read and acquaint yourself with the facts of the Barden bill—the now famous, infamous bill that would unjustly discriminate against minority groups of America's children. Unlike you, Mrs. Roosevelt, I did not make a public statement until I had studied every phase of the Barden bill; nor did I take issue with a man because his faith differed from mine. We differed, Congressman Barden and I, over the unimpeachable issue of equal benefits and equal rights for all America's children.

"I had intended ignoring your personal attack, but, as the days passed and in two subsequent columns you continued your anti-Catholic campaign, I became convinced that it was in the interest of all American and the cause of justice itself that your misstatements should be challenged in every quarter of our country where they have already spun and spread their web of prejudice. I have received hundreds of messages from persons of all faiths demanding that I answer you. I am, therefore, not free to ignore you.

"You say you are against religious control of schools which are paid for by taxpayers' money. That is exactly what I, too, oppose. But I am also opposed to any bill that includes children who attend parochial schools for the purpose of receiving funds from the Federal Government while it excludes these same children from the distribution and benefits of the funds allocated. I believe that if the Federal Government provides a bottle of milk to each child in a public school it should provide milk for all school children. I believe that if Federal funds are used to transport children to public schools they should be used to transport parochial school children. I believe if through the use of Federal funds the children who attend public schools are immunized from contagious diseases that all children should be protected from these diseases.

" 'Taxation without representation is tyranny' was the cry that roused and rallied our pioneer Americans to fight for justice. Taxation without participation should rouse today's Americans to equal ardor to protest an injustice that would deprive millions of American children of health and safety benefits to which all our children are entitled. And the Supreme Court of the United States has declared that health and transportation services and the distribution of nonreligious textbooks to pupils attending parochial schools do not violate our Constitution.

" 'The separation of church and state is extremely important to us who hold to the original traditions of our Nation,' you continue. But health and safety benefits and providing standard nonreligious textbooks for all American children have nothing to do with the question of separation of church and state!

"I cannot presume upon the press to discuss, analyze or refute each inaccuracy in your columns—for they are manifold. Had you taken an objective, impersonal stand, I could then, in the same impersonal manner, answer you. But you did not. Apparently your attitude of mind precluded you from comprehending issues which you either rigorously defended or flagrantly condemned while ignorant of the facts concerning both the Barden bill and my own denunciation of it.

"American freedom not only permits but encourages differences of opinion and I do not question your right to differ with me. But why, I wonder, do you repeatedly plead causes that are anti-Catholic? Even if you cannot find it within your heart to defend the rights of innocent little children and heroic, helpless men like Cardinal Martyr Mindszenty, can you not have the charity not to cast upon them still another stone?

"Equally They Shared," He Says

"America's Catholic youth helped fight a long and bitter fight to save all Americans from oppression and persecution. Their broken bodies on blood-soaked foreign fields were grim and tragic testimony to this fact. I saw them there—on every fighting front—as equally they shared with their fellow-fighters all the sacrifice, terror and gore of war—as alike they shared the little good and glory that sometimes comes to men as together they fight and win a brutal battle.

"Would you deny equality to these Catholic boys who daily stood at the sad threshold of untimely death and suffered martyrdom that you and I and the world of men might live in liberty and peace? Would you deny their children equal rights and benefits with other sects—rights for which their fathers paid equal taxation with other fathers and fought two bitter wars that all children might forever be free from fear, oppression and religious persecution?

"During the war years you visited the hospitals in many countries, as did I. You, too, saw America's sons—Catholic, Protestant and Jew alike—young, battered, scarred, torn and mutilated, dying in agony that we might learn to live in charity with one another. Then how was it that your own heart was not purged of all prejudices by what you saw these, our sons, suffer?

"Now my case is closed. This letter will be released to the public tomorrow after it has been delivered to you by special delivery today. And even though you may again use your columns to attack me and again accuse me of starting a controversy, I shall not again publicly acknowledge you. For, whatever you may say in the future, your record of anti-Catholicism stands for all to see—a record which you yourself wrote on the pages of history which cannot be recalled—documents of discrimination unworthy of an American mother!

"Sincerely Yours,
"Francis Cardinal Spellman
"Archbishop of New York."

Text of 'My Day' in Dispute

New York, July 22 (AP).—Following is the text of the June 23, 1949, column of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, published in the New York World-Telegram which touched off the dispute with Cardinal Spellman:

The "controversy brought about by the request made by Francis Cardinal Spellman that Catholic schools should share in Federal aid funds forces upon the citizens of the country the kind of decision that is going to be very difficult to make.

"Those of us who believe in the right of any human being to belong to whatever church he sees fit, and to worship God in his own way, cannot be accused of prejudice when we do not want to see public education connected with religious control of the schools, which are paid for by taxpayers' money.

"If we desire our children to go to schools of any particular kind, be it because we think they should have religious instruction or for any other reason, we are entirely free to set up those schools and to pay for them. Thus, our children would receive the kind of education we feel would best fit them for life.

"Many years ago it was decided that the public schools of our country should be entirely separated from any kind of denominational control, and these are the only schools that are free, tax-supported schools. The greatest number of our children attend these schools.

It is quite possible that private schools, whether they are denominational schools — Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist or whatever—or whether they are purely academic, may make a great contribution to the public school systems, both on the lower levels and on the higher levels. They will be somewhat freer to develop new methods and to try experiments, and they will serve as yardsticks in the competitive area of creating better methods of imparting knowledge.

"This, however, is the very reason why they should not receive Federal funds; in fact, no tax funds of any kind.

"The separation of church and state is extremely important to any of us who hold to the original traditions of our Nation. To change these traditions by changing our traditional attitude toward public education would be harmful, I think, to our whole attitude of tolerance in the religious area. If we look at situations which have arisen in the past in Europe and other world areas, I think we will see the reasons why it is wise to hold to our early traditions."

the amount payable to the State under the bill.

2. Unlike the Senate-passed measure, the Barden bill requires no State plan to be submitted to the Federal Government, and no reports from the States. It omits the Senate-adopted provision that a "just and equitable" proportion of the funds should be spent for schools for minority races in those States which have a segregated school system.

3. The bill backs up its prohibition against the expenditure of Federal funds for other than public schools with an extraordinary injunction procedure. It provides that "whenever in the judgment of a taxpayer of such State any person has engaged, or is about to engage, in any acts or practices which constitute or will constitute a violation of the first sentence of this section" (the prohibition against giving funds to other than public schools) the taxpayer can go into court for an injunction.

It is this last provision which has kicked up the greatest storm of protest against the bill. Lawyers, both Catholic and Protestant, have pointed out that this section could, and in the circumstances undoubtedly would, lead to endless legal snarls and controversies.

The House group also has before it a third bill introduced by Representative John E. Fogarty (D., R. I.), which has the blessing of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

This measure, like the Senate-passed act, would leave it up to the States whether or not parochial schools should receive purely educational aid.

Very similar to the Senate-passed bill, it lumps together the aid to education bill and the Senate-passed measure to give Federal assistance for the health of all children, regardles sof what schools they attend.

Therefore it calls for the annual expenditure of 325 million dollars instead of 300 million dollars. It provides that 10 per cent of the funds allocated to each State shall go for health, transportation and nonreligious textbooks.

The Fogarty measure provides that if any State constitution forbids health aids to school children other than those in public schools, the funds can go directly from the Federal Government to the nonpublic schools for the health, transportation and nonreligious textbook services.

Medical Men Fight Welfare Dept. Plan

By The Associated Press

President Truman's plan for creation of a department of welfare to supervise health, education and social security activities bumped into sharp opposition from medical groups yesterday.

Spokesmen for the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association and the American Association of Physicians and Surgeons urged instead an independent health agency directed by a doctor.

Some of the witnesses before the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee also made clear they fear that creation of the proposed department would give impetus to a compulsory health insurance program.

Under a reorganization plan submitted to Congress by the President, the welfare department would replace the present Federal Security Administration which has supervision over the Public Health Service and some other Federal medical activities.

Sees Danger to Health

Dr. Robert E. S. Young of Columbus, Ohio, president of the Association of Physicians and Surgeons, said the plan would be "a backward step—one that would endanger the health of the Nation."

He added it "would place control of the Nation's health activities in the inexperienced and unskilled hands of social or welfare workers."

Dr. Young also contended that it "is only reasonable to assume" that it is part of a program "to pave the way" for compulsory health insurance.

Dr. E. Harold Gale of Albany, N. Y., spokesman for the American Dental Association, touched on the same theme in his testimony, saying that "Some skepticism as to the real purpose" of the plan is justified.

He said it would elevate to Cabinet status and thus give "enhanced prestige" to the only existing Government agency which can provide the machinery to operate the Administration's health insurance program.

Advocacy Reiterated

The American Medical Association's long advocacy of a department of health of Cabinet status was reiterated by Dr. James R. Miller of Hartford, Conn., chairman of the executive committee of the board of trustees.

An investigation of the Federal Security Agency "before its administrator (Oscar Ewing) automatically be transferred to a Cabinet post" was urged by Dr. J. J. Monfort, of Batesville, Ark.

Monfort, who said he appeared for the Arkansas Medical Society, said in a statement that Ewing has "a man of known Communist or Socialist pronouncements" as his assistant.

Mike Rector Has a Rival

March that his doctors felt it safe to move him to Washington for treatment by Dr. Robert E. Moran, plastic surgeon friend of the boy's father.

The North Carolina boy, who will celebrate his fifth birthday on August 10, was flown here in a private plane borrowed by his parents. Mrs. Morrison took an apartment at Northbrook Arms, 3426 16th st. nw., and later brought Tommy's three sisters to Washington to be near him.

Doctors estimate Tommy, like the Rector boy, suffered severe burns to 70 per cent of his body. The burns extended from the back of his head down his back to his knees, and from his face, skipping a small patch on the chest, to the lower abdomen.

Now resting fairly comfortable in bulging, pressure-pack bandages, he still has need for new skin over 50 to 60 per cent of his body, the doctor said last night. The rest of the once-burned area is covered with skin generated from the unaffected parts or regrown in self-grafts.

But it's Tommy's courage and good humor that amaze all.

"He was saying 'when I get well' when we were thinking 'if he gets well,'" his mother said.

Tommy has had numerous skin grafts from others, including ones from his two oldest sisters, Patricia, 12, and Barbara, 10. But more important, his doctors said last night, he has been able to take the additional pain of grafting of his own skin.

By careful planning, they said, they have been able to transplant healthy skin to burned areas from the same donor site. One site, they said, has already yielded three grafts. Doctors at Casualty Hospital are still building up the Rector boy for grafts from his own unburned skin areas.

Aiding Dr. Moran in the treatments, Tommy's mother said, are Drs. Thomas Keliher and Charles Millwater, internist and pediatrician, respectively.

Armed Forces Chaplains' Board Ordered

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson this week called for establishment of an Armed Forces Chaplains' Board to coordinate policies and activities of the Chaplains Corps of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The six-member board will be composed of the chiefs of chaplains of the Army, Navy and Air Force and one additional member from each of the three services. The chairmanship will be rotated annually between the three chiefs.

In his directive, Secretary Johnson outlined the following policies of the new board:

"1. The establishment of policy pertaining to procurement, standards, requirements, assignment and training of military chaplains, including civilian components.

"2. The establishment and maintenance of a close and harmonious relationship with civilian church organizations and the clergy.

"3. The establishment of policies on the procurement of supplies, equipment and facilities."

The board will coordinate the program providing for exchange of chaplains between the three services where bases and stations of the Army, Navy and Air Force are near to each other.

The exchange of chaplains would provide a balanced program of services and religious counseling while conserving the number of chaplains required by each military service, according to Johnson's office.

The Chaplains Corps of the three services have been working together on an unofficial basis for some time. The directive establishing the Armed Forces Chaplains' Board was based on recommendations of the three services.

Washington is a city of "national" churches.

At least a dozen of the churches in the city have been designated as representative of their denomination in the Nation's Capital.

In some cases this is largely an honorary title. In others, it means that funds to build or maintain the church come from church members who live in every State of the Union.

Although no Protestant Episcopal church in the country has been designated as the national church of that faith, the unfinished Washington Cathedral at Connecticut and Massachusetts aves. nw. is supported by church members from all over the United States and from foreign countries.

It is the only cathedral in the United States which is the Episcopal seat of two bishops—the bishop of Washington, and the presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

Cathedral Has No Parish

The cathedral has no parish from which to receive financial aid, and drives for funds are conducted through the National Cathedral Association. Construction was begun in 1907, and with the exception of the war years, has been under way ever since.

The American Roman Catholic hierarchy has designated the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, which was begun in 1920, as a national shrine.

Like the cathedral, it is supported by church members in every American diocese. Special collections are taken up in all American Catholic churches on a designated Sunday each year.

A drive for the five million dollars necessary to complete the basilica is now under way. Officials hope to finish the building in 1954.

Another of the city's national churches is Metropolitan Memorial Methodist, near American University, at Nebraska and New Mexico aves. nw.

It was in 1852 that the General Conference of the Methodist Church, meeting in Boston, Mass., gave its approval to erection of a national church in Washington. Funds for the national church were contributed by members and friends from every State in the United States.

Dedicated in 1932

The present building, dedicated in 1932, took the place of an earlier Metropolitan Church which was at John Marshall pl. and C st. nw., and was dedicated in 1869.

National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, is the representative church of the Disciples of Christ in the Nation's Capital.

Organized as a congregation in 1844, it later was known as the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. The present million-dollar building was erected in 1930 through gifts of more than 40,000 American Disciples of Christ.

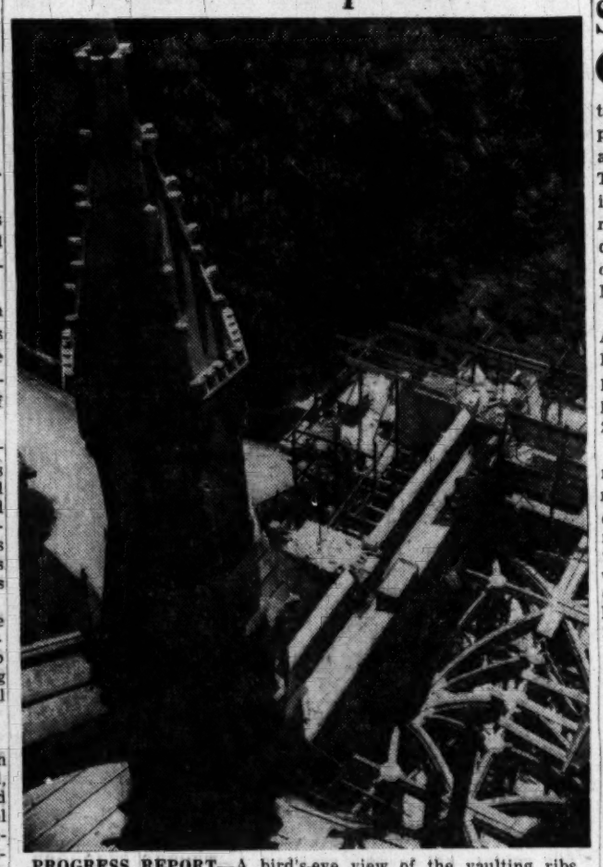
One of the churches most recently designated a national church is National Presbyterian at Connecticut ave. and N sts. nw. Formerly known as Covenant-First Presbyterian, it became the national church of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1945.

One of the oldest churches in the District, National Presbyterian Church had its origin at a religious meeting of stone masons in a carpenter shop on the grounds of the White House in 1792. Known as First Presbyterian Church, the congregation met after 1827 in a building on John Marshall Square.

In 1885 a group of members of First Church organized the Church of the Covenant at Connecticut ave. and N st. nw. The First Presbyterian Church and the Church of the Covenant were merged into Covenant-First Church in 1930.

National Baptist Memorial Church, 16th and Columbia rd. nw., is the national church of both the Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions. Originally known as Immanuel Baptist Church, it was organized in 1906.

Shrine Nears Completion . . .



PROGRESS REPORT—A bird's-eye view of the vaulting ribs of the War Memorial Shrine shows the project nearing completion in the south transept of Washington Cathedral. Officials hope the $281,000 necessary to continue the work, carrying the building across the entrance portal and erecting the west aisle of the transept, will be available before the present operation is finished

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

Dr. Ralph K. Merker, general presbyter and stated clerk of the Presbytery of Washington City, will preach at 11 a. m. at Sixth Presbyterian Church, 16th and Kennedy sts. nw. Dr. Merker, formerly pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Erie, Pa., has held his present position since 1943.

A congregational meeting will take place following the 10:50 a. m. service at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. Members will vote on a successor to the Rev. Myron W. Chrisman, assistant pastor, who has accepted a call to become pastor of First Christian Church, Tuscaloosa, Ala. Mr. Chrisman will preach at the morning service.

It will be "Christmas in July" at 11 a. m. at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, 5671 Connecticut ave. nw. Dr. Edward O. Clark will use "Have You Heard the Angels Sing?" as his sermon topic, and gifts for Miss Elizabeth Mooney, church missionary in India, will be received and used to decorate the Christmas tree.

Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, the pastor, will give the sixth in a series of sermons on Old Testament texts at 9 and 11 a. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas cir. His sermon at both services is "On Feeling Sorry for Yourself."

The State of Iowa will be honored at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral when its flag will be carried in the procession of the choir and clergy. The Rev. Crawford W. Brown will give the fourth in a series of sermons. It is entitled "Your Business."

Turks Allow Ark Search, Tass Reports

Moscow, July 22 (AP).—A Tass dispatch from Ankara, Turkey, says the Turkish Army General Staff has given permission to an American group to explore strategic Mount Ararat for the remains of Noah's Ark.

The story, printed in the Communist Party organ, Pravda, called the expedition "an Intelligence Service activity under the guise of a search for Noah's Ark."

It said the group is staying in Ankara waiting for a ship to arrive from the United States with equipment.

Mount Ararat is near the Soviet-Turkish frontier.

The Americans are Dr. A. J. Smith of Greensboro, N. C.; E. J. Newton of Colfax, N. C.; Walter I. Wood of Sea Cliff, N. Y, and W. G. Ogg of Knoxville, Tenn.

There have been numerous reports in Turkey that remains of the Ark have been sighted.

Dr. Brooks to Discuss When God Gives Help

Dr. Robert W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Temple, 11th and R sts. nw., will speak on "When God Gives Us Help" at 11 a. m. Sunday.

The Men's Brotherhood of the church, which meets at 10:15 a. m., will discuss "Catholicism versus Communism" under the direction of Dr. St. Elmo Brady, summer director.

to local counterpart funds if a participant failed to comply with any treaty with the United States. This was designed to protect American businessmen in French Morocco who complained they were discriminated against in violation of a 100-year-old treaty with the Moroccans.

5. An amendment requiring ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman to ask France and Britain to review the program of dismantling German plants.

20 Chemical Plants

Robertson said the last amendment was designed to stop dismantling of about 20 German chemical plants, ruled no longer needed for industrial rehabilitation. He said Hoffman did not want to be placed in the position of passing "on a question of top level policy for the three governments involved."

The Virginia Democrat, himself a leader of the congressional economy bloc, warned that it would be "false economy" to cut ECA more than 10 per cent below its authorization.

Hoffman had asked $4,198,200,000 for the 12 months. The Senate committee cut this to $3,778,380,000. The ECA administrator has made no formal bid for restoration of the full amount and apparently his Senate supporters will not do so. The Vandenberg-Robertson strategy was designed to head off a further cut.

McClellan Amendment Hit

Robertson told the Senate the United States "will make enemies and the Russians will make propaganda" out of the McClellan amendment holding ECA purchases to a fixed farm surplus list.

Said Robertson: "We have no right to say to these countries that although you need machinery more than you need cotton, wheat or corn, you've got to take our cotton, wheat and corn."

Senator John R. McClellan (D., Ark.) replied that the farm purchase estimates were prepared by the recipient nations and "why should we not take them at their word?"

Robertson retorted that the Senate unit has lopped 10 per cent from ECA funds since the estimates were made and that European commodity needs shift.

British Trade Pacts Assailed

Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) got into the debate to hit the British trade agreements with Russia and Argentina. Robertson said he "deplored" the British "barter deals" as much as Jenner, but said both were "born of desperation" because of Britain's dollar shortage.

Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) also tangled with Robertson to call for approval of all of the committee's amendments. But McKellar added: "This isn't my bill. I would have cut ECA more if I had had my way. I was beaten."

Church Set To Dedicate $10,000 Gift

Dedication of $10,000 worth of improvements at Marvin Memorial Methodist Church, Four Corners, Silver Spring, Md., will take place at 11 a. m. Sunday.

The Rev. Walter M. Michael, father of the Rev. Marion S. Michael, pastor of the church, will be the guest speaker at the service. Dr. Michael, who now lives at Alva, Fla., was formerly pastor of Brightwood Park and Eldbrooke Methodist Churches in Washington.

The $10,000 was given to the church by Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson of Teneriffe, on Colesville pike, in memory of her husband, T. Lamar Jackson. Mr. Jackson was a director of the Sandy Spring, Md., Bank and a successful farmer.

Improvements to be dedicated include a rebuilt organ, new minister's study, two choir rooms, a baptismal font and a brick bulletin board. In addition, lights to floodlight the spirt of the colonial church building have been installed.

Before the service, Mrs. Mary Aldrich, new organist of the church, will play a recital on the rebuilt organ. Mrs. Aldrich was recently named to succeed George W. Koehler, who has accepted the post of organist for First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw.

Paper Says Hunt Diary Names Vaughan, Graham

Chicago, July 22 (U.P.). — The Chicago Sun-Times tonight said it had learned that the James V. Hunt diary contains the names of Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan and Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, White House military attaches.

Rev. Edmund Strait Announces Subject

"When Life Gets You Down" will be the sermon subject of the Rev. Edmund R. Strait, assistant minister, at 9:30 a. m., at Westmoreland Congregational Church, Westmoreland circle nw.

At 6:30 p. m., Thursday the Pilgrim Fellowship, young peoples group of the church, will give a "maid's night out supper," followed by community singing and movies.

investigators, gives a day-to-day account of his contacts with various Government officials. Reportedly, it describes the contracts he helped negotiate and fees collected, as well as the names of officials he met at cocktail parties and what they talked about there.

Members of the Senate investigating staff are working on the diary, it was said, while copies are in the hands of Pentagon chiefs, the War Assets Administration and other agencies for checking the incidents mentioned.

Hoey would not say definitely how the committee got hold of the document, but indicated Hunt had surrendered it voluntarily when its existence was discovered.

Asked about the point, the North Carolinian said Hunt "offered no resistance" to giving it to the Senate group.

Another member of the committee, Senator R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) described the diary as a "great aid" to the investigators. There's "lots of material to work from and hosts of names," he added.

"I've Been Wondering"

Reporters asked Hoey why a man in Hunt's line of work would keep such a diary. The Senator grinned and said:

"I've been wondering that myself."

The investigation into the activities of "five percenters" was started after the New York Herald Tribune reported last month that a New England manufacturer paid Hunt $1000 to get him a Government contract.

The New Englander, Paul Grindle, was quoted as saying Hunt asserted he had influence with Waitt, Feldman and Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, military aide to the President.

Hunt, a former Army lieutenant colonel and WAA official, denied he used "influence" in getting Government contracts for his clients.

He describes himself as a "management counsellor" who can help them in contract negotiations because of his knowledge of Government procedures.

The term "5 per center" for those who help clients get Federal business comes from the practice of charging the businessmen a fee or commission which normally amounts to 5 per cent of the contract.

There is nothing illegal about the practice. One of the objects of the Senate committee, members say, is to write legislation to regulate the practice.

Senator Hoey declined to state whether or not General Vaughan's name appeared in the Hunt diary. Nor would he indicate his position on Republican demands the Truman aide be called before the investigating group.

But Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.), a member of the committee, said yesterday it is "a pretty safe conclusion" the group will write to Vaughan and ask him to appear.

Vaughan Remark Recalled

Vaughan recently told reporters he knows of 300 "5 percenters" in Washington. Mundt says he would like to have the general identify some of them if he can.

Senator Hoey described the Hunt diary as "interesting" and said it has "lots of things in it which have no relationship tothis case." He indicated that for this reason, the whole document probably would not be put into the public record at the open hearings.

Others described the curious document as a "loose-leaf affair of one volume." Hoey said he could not confirm reports it ran to 1000 pages.

Nats Beaten Out by Cleveland in Tenth, 2 to I

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

WITHOUT JOE DiMAGGIO, the Yankees grabbed the American League lead on opening day and held it for two months. They're still on top, but without Joe DiMaggio they wouldn't be. At a time when the Indians and Red Sox began to make their long-awaited moves, the Yankees, happily, had DiMag.

In the 21 games he has played since he rejoined the club, the Yanks cooled off both the Red Sox and the Indians. They deflated the Boston threat by beating the Red Sox in five straight, mostly on account of DiMaggio's hitting. After Cleveland narrowed the Yankees' lead to 3½ games the other day, DiMag personally licked 'em with his batting in their last two engagements.

POVICH

DiMaggio's mere .342 batting average is a libel of what he has actually been doing for the Yanks. He has averaged a homer in every third game and knocked in better than one run per contest. Nearly half of his 26 hits have been for extra bases with three two-baggers, a pair of triples and seven homers rocketing off his bat. All of this was happening when the Yankees were threatening to sag in the face of the rush the Indians and Red Sox.

THERE'S LIFE in that American League pennant race yet, despite the 5½-game margin of the Yanks over the second-place Indians, with the Red Sox 3½ games farther back. With more than two months to play, Yankee Manager Casey Stengel can as yet take no great comfort in that Yankee lead, and there is much, in fact, to concern him.

The other day, the Yankees called in a 35-year-old pitcher from Oakland of the Coast League for relief work. Stengel is painfully aware that Vic Raschi is still the only Yankee pitcher with a reasonable expectancy of going the route and winning. Even more valuable than Raschi to the Yankee pitching staff is reliever Joe Page, who has been rescuing such wilting winners as Allie Reynolds, Ed Lopat and Tommy Byrne all season.

Stengel's first-base situation is such that he is still calling on Tommy Henrich to move in from the outfield and take over. Without Henrich, DiMaggio is the only solid figure in the Yankee outfield. Neither Hank Bauer nor Cliff Mapes have distinguished themselves as hitters. And the Yanks are still trusting that Catcher Yogi Berra will drive in more runs than he lets in.

FOR THE PAST three weeks, both the Indians and the Red Sox have actually been playing better ball than the Yankees. The Red Sox rebounded with a long winning streak from their five-straight losses to the Yanks, and Stengel still considers them the club to lick despite the fact the Indians are closer.

With the Red Sox, the paradox is that lately they have begun to get good pitching. It isn't the same pitiful staff with which Joe McCarthy started the season and discovered that all of his hitting couldn't get his club out of seventh place. Maurice McDermott, the erstwhile wild left-hander who was recalled from Louisville, all of a sudden has been getting the ball over the plate for the Red Sox and winning.

There never was any doubt in the American League that McDermott would be a tremendous figure if he acquired control, and that last apparently has been happening. And McCarthy has gotten a big lift, too, from the recent pitching performances of young Chuck Stobbs, the bonus baby, who was unimpressive at the start of the season. McDermott and Stobbs make the Red Sox look vastly tougher.

IT IS REMEMBERED that the Boston club was even farther out of it last season when they developed a rush that carried them to a pennant tie with the Indians. It was easy to discount McCarthy's club as a pennant factor when his pitching was looking so sorry; but that is a changed picture, and with guys like Ted Williams and Vern Stephens driving in runs in batches, Stengel has reason to fear the Sox.

All of which isn't counting the Indians out of it. They're a better team with Lou Boudreau at third base and out of the batting slump that afflicted him most of the season. Mike Garcia has joined Bob Lemon as a powerful sort of pitcher, and even Gene Bearden is now showing some of his 1948 form.

The Indians are getting better hitting from Mickey Vernon than he gave the Nats the last three seasons. Vernon, Boudreau, Joe Gordon and Larry Doby are still home-run threats. On the power side, the Indians are formidable and Jim Hegan is the best catcher in the league. The Indians haven't lost the pennant yet.

Yanks Belt Detroit, 8-2; Byrne Hurls Four-Hitter

Detroit, July 22 (AP).—Left-hander Tommy Byrne of the New York Yankees tamed the Detroit Tigers for the fourth time this season as he beat them 8 to 2 on a five-hitter tonight.

The crowd of 51,076 saw Byrne beat the Tigers' ace righthander Virgil Trucks in their fourth meeting of the season. Byrne previously had beaten Trucks twice by 12-0 margins and had lost a 2-to-1 11-inning decision to him.

Byrne's other victory over the Tigers had been chalked up against Hal Newhouser.

The Yankee lefthander survived a very shaky first inning in which he gave the Tigers their two runs on three walks and two hits, one of them Pat Mullin's sixth homer of the season.

Byrne got great support from the Yankees as they banged out a dozen hits and came up with three double plays to make his task easier.

The game was just about settled in the fourth inning when the Yankees, who were leading 3 to 2, mauled Trucks and sent him to the showers.

The fireworks started with one out as Charley Keller walloped his first homer of the season. Snuffy Stirnweiss walked and Pitcher Byrne then flied out for out number two.

Trucks lost his stuff as he walked Hank Bauer and Phil Rizzuto to load the bases. He then walked Tommy Henrich, forcing in Stirnweiss with run number four.

Joe Dimaggio then got his only hit in five official times at bat, a single to left scoring Baur and Rizzuto to make it 7 to 2 and bring Marv Grissom in to pitch for the Tigers.

Grissom and Stubby Overmire held the Yankees pretty well in check the rest of the way with Overmire giving up the Yankees' eighth run in the eighth inning.

Yankee Catcher Yogi Berra developed a pain in his right side in the seventh inning and retired in favor of relief catcher Gus Niarhos.

Dixie Bowl Game Sponsors Abandon Holiday Event

Birmingham, Ala., July 22 (AP).—Dixie Bowl sponsors announced today they would not attempt to stage another postseason football game here next January 1.

The announcement came from Leo Burson, Memphis, who has backed the two games already held, and Carl Wiegand, acting for the American Legion. The Legion aided in promotion of the two previous contests.

Burson and Wiegand said the postseason game may be resumed in later years. Arkansas defeated William and Mary, 21-19, in the first Dixie Bowl game January 1, 1948. Baylor won from Wake Forest, 20-7, last January 1.

No reason for the decision to drop the contest was given.

Condition Causes Backaches

Barney McCoskey's Ailing Leg Still Baffling Physicians

Philadelphia, July 22 (AP).—Barney McCosky, ailing Philadelphia Athletics' outfielder, is hoping X-rays will give doctors the information needed to treat the unusual bone condition that has sidelined the veteran.

The actual trouble—or what Barney thinks is wrong—is a loose bone in his left leg which at times makes the leg seem shorter. The condition causes backaches.

Doctors seem to have trouble diagnosing the ailment, Barney said today, adding that he had been to plenty of them.

Meanwhile, McCosky is working out at Shibe Park in the mornings while the A's are out West. He dons a uniform and rubber jacket and does nothing but run from left field to right field and back. Then he takes a whirlpool bath in water of better than 100 degrees.

A .320 hitter in seven major league seasons, McCosky expects to be put back on the active list when his 60 days are up next Wednesday and he hopes to do a little pinchhitting. Fielding ground balls is not conducive to quick recovery, his doctors tell him.

"I'll be glad to get back even for pinch hitting," McCosky said.

Bobo Back With Lookouts, Pitches Against Vols Tonight

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 22 (AP).—Louis (Bobo) Newsom returned to active duty with the Chattanooga Lookouts today after a nine-day suspension which grew out of his urge to return to the major leagues.

Lifting of Newsom's suspension was announced by Zinn Beck, general manager of the Lookouts.

Newsom said he is scheduled to pitch against the Nashville Vols tomorrow night.

Joe Engel, president of the Lookouts, previously had announced that Newsom would be suspended for the season. The action came after the pitcher refused to accompany the team on a road trip, July 13.

Griff Okays Engel's Action

Although Nats' President Clark Griffith's last quote on the Newsom situation was to the effect that Bobo was "finished without organization," he apparently relented yesterday.

Informed that Newsom was back in a Chattanooga uniform, Griff was unexcited. "That's okay with me," he said. "Anything Engel wants to do is all right. He's the boss down there."

Braves Beat Pirates, 5 to 3; Bickford Hurt by Line Drive

Boston, July 22 (AP).—Del Crandall's two-on triple in the fifth inning tonight clinched a 5-3 win for the Boston Braves over the Pittsburgh Pirates that may be an extremely costly one. In the seventh, Vernon Bickford, the Tribesmen's most effective righthander, was carried off with a possible left instep fracture after being struck by Clyde McCullough's screaming liner.

At the time Bickford had a 4-3 lead and the Braves added another tally for Reliever Bob Hogue in the seventh. By drawing credit for the win, Bickford became the National League Champions' first 12-game winner.

After being felled by McCullough's terrific grass-cutter, Bickford was removed on a stretcher.

The clubhouse examination disclosed much discoloration. The pitcher, however, was able to depart on crutches for St. Elizabeth's Hospital for X-rays, the first of which were negative.

Lefty Vic Lombardi, making his first start after a two-week's layoff, complained of an aching pitching elbow after the Pirates gave him a 2-1 lead in the first inning. Murry Dickson then took over and was the victim of all but two of the Braves' 11 hits, including Pete Reiser's sixth homer with none on in the fourth.

Cubs Beat Out Giants by 6-5

New York, July 22 (AP).—Frank Sauer's nineteenth home run, a towering drive over the left field roof in the seventh inning, helped the Chicago Cubs come from behind and defeat the New York Giants, 6-5, today.

Johnny Mize, the Cubs' willowy southpaw, went the distance to record his fifth victory against six setbacks.

Though he was tagged for 11 hits, Schmitz was in trouble in only one inning—the third. Two errors by his mates didn't help any.

With runners on first and third and one run already in, Sid Gordon lined a single to center. Mal Jeffcoat let the ball elude him, and the three runners scored easily.

Cards Slice Bums Lead to 1½, Win, 3-1

Brooklyn, July 21 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals cut Brooklyn's National League lead to 1½ games tonight with George (Red) Munger pitching a brilliant five-hit, 3-1, victory over the Dodgers in the opener of an important four game series.

The Cardinals scored first when Stan Musial banged his seventeenth home run of the season off Preacher Roe in the first inning.

Brooklyn tied the score in its half of the first after two down on Duke Snider's triple and Jackie Robinson's single. The Cards grabbed the lead for keeps in the third on a single, error, groundout, walk and Nippy Jones' fielder's choice.

Munger singled home Enos Slaughter with the Cards' final run in the sixth.

Slaughter ended the game with a spectacular leaping catch against the left field wall of Gil Hodges drive with one on in the ninth.

The triumph was Munger's eighth of the season and his third without a setback against the Dodgers. The big right-hander fanned five and walked only one in ending Roe's seven-game winning streak before a capacity turnout of 33,120.

Chuck Diering, who made two sparkling catches in the fourth inning, singled to start the Cardinal third and when Gene Hermanski fumbled the ball, raced to second. Diering moved to third as Red Schoendienst grounded out to first.

Dammers went back early this morning. In another hour of fishing off the Main st. bridge he caught another 14 trout.

Randy Gumpert scored his second shutout by pitching the distance for the fourteenth time this season on a yield of four hits for his eighth victory.

The White Sox sent 14 men to bat in their biggest inning of this season against Carl Scheib, who pitched all the way on a yield of 18 hits along with issuing eight bases on balls.

In between the first and last Chicago innings Scheib was a runless pitcher on a yield of six hits. Then the White Sox broke loose again in the eighth, scoring four runs on four hits.

First Baseman Charlie Kress paced the White Sox to their eighth win in the past 12 games with three singles and a double in five official times at bat. In suffering their thirteenth loss in the past 16 games, the A's got only one runner as far as third base. Elmer Valo trippled with one out in the first inning.

Paper Quotes May as Saying Locke Should Be Barred in U.S.

TOLEDO, O., July 22 (AP).—The Toledo Blade today quoted George S. May of Chicago as saying he thought South African Bobby Locke should be barred from American golf tournaments by the PGA.

The Blade said May, in a telephone conversation, said: "I was contacted early this week by PGA officials who asked if the barring of Locke would hurt my $55,000 All-American tournaments at the Tam O'Shanter Club, August 6-14.

"I told the PGA officials it would not hurt me, and added that after what he (Locke) did to the Inverness Club in Toledo, he should be barred.

Locke, involved in a controversy with Inverness officials because he overlooked a commitment to play here in the current $15,000 four-ball matches, was quoted earlier in England as saying:

"I feel sure that George S. May will welcome my appearance in his tournament next month."

Inverness officials protested Locke's default, which came after he won the British open July 9, and asked PGA officials to bar him from future tournaments.

The PGA executive committee has the request under consideration.

Calvert's Fine Work Undermined By Al Kozar

By Morris Siegel

Cleveland, July 22.—An u earned third-inning run earned t Cleveland Indians a 10-inning, 2- victory over the Nats tonight.

Pitcher Mike Garcia, who woul have been the victim of a 1- five-hit job by Paul Calvert, score the extra inning marker that brok up the glittering mound duel an brought the Nats their sevent straight licking.

Al Kozar's overthrow to firs base set up the run that deprive Calvert of a brilliant performance one which would have been re warded in victory on the strengt of Eddie Yost's third-inning homer Thurman Tucker, who drove i Dale Mitchell with the tainted run also lashed out the single that de livered Garcia with the winning run.

Garcia Singles

Garcia struck a mighty blow i his own behalf by opening th tenth with a single. Mitchell' sacrifice bunt moved him to second and Tucker's ringing single to lef sent Garcia and 29,988 Clevelan partisans home, happy and victorious.

For Garcia, a sullen Mexican i his first year in the majors, it was success No. 8 on a yield of six hits only two after the third inning when Yost swatted his seventh home run.

Calvert, who hasn't won since June 3, deserved a better fate. Except for the tenth inning lapse, he had the Indians completely at his mercy. He was in only one real jam—occasioned by Catcher Jake Early—and he pitched out of that masterfully.

Calvert had fanned Jim Hegan and Garcia in the third and had two strikes on Dale Mitchell before trouble set in. Mitchell grounded to Kozar's left, but the Nat second baseman gobbled it up, but threw over Eddie Robinson's head for a two-base error. Tucker followed up this advantage by singling to center and the Indians had

Coaltown Frightens Off Rivals

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—Coaltown, Ponder and the once mighty "golden gelding," Armed, today were entered with six other outstanding distance stars to race in the $55,700 Arlington handicap at Arlington Park tomorrow.

Whether all will accept the challenge from the speedy Calumet Farm's trio is doubtful. In fact, there may be so many scratches that the handicap might be run without betting. The Arlington management prepared for this possibility by getting permission from the Illinois Racing Board to conduct nine races tomorrow, instead of the usual eight.

There was doubt that Dixiana's Stable Shy, E. E. Voynow's Stud Poker, O. J. Breault's Brolite and P. J. Valenti's Caillou Rouge, would attempt to overthrow the Calumet flyers. Of the Calumet trio, Coaltown, the Nation's top handicap performer, has 9 victories in 10 races this season; Ponder, is the Kentucky Derby winner and Armed is always dangerous.

However, the Dixiana Stable, owned by Charles T. Fisher, Detroit automobile body manufacturer, is almost certain to send out Star Reward, the speedster which surprisingly dealt Coaltown its only 1949 defeat in the recent Equipoise Mile at Arlington. Previously Coaltown had triumphed in eight successive races.

The ninth candidate is Walmac Farm's Volcanic, which established an American turf record at Arlington at a mile and an eighth. However, tomorrow's handicap is on the flat at a mile and a quarter with the prospects of an off track.

The fleet Coaltown will carry top weight of 130 pounds, while Ponder and Armed will tote 113 and Star Reward 116.

Hippenstiel, Burrows and Oliver Win

By Jules Loh

Tony Vincent from Elmhurst, N. Y., fourth seeded, advanced to the semifinal round of the Middle Atlantic Tennis championships with a 6—3, 6—2 win over Shelton Horsley of Richmond, Va., yesterday at Kenwood Country Club.

Horsley was forced to abandon his previous plan of a net attack with his failure to get his first serve in, and Vincent kept him away from the forecourt with deep returns.

Top-ranked Hal Burrows dropshotted his way to a 6—2, 6—4 quarter-final victory over Washington's Jim Thackara, and in the other fifth round matches Capt. Robin Hippenstiel disposed of Don Leavens, 6—2, 6—2, and second seeded visitor, Charley Oliver, eliminated Davey Johnsen, 6—3, 6—1.

In today's semifinals Burrows will face Hippenstiel and Oliver will square off with Vincent.

Madge Rurac continued into the semifinals of the women's division with a quick 6—0, 6—1 trouncing of Sara Moore. To date, Mrs. Rurac, Rumanian champ and two-time clay court titlist, has lost only four of the 40 games she has played.

Charlotte Decker also gained the semifinal bracket with a two-hour 7—5, 11—9 win over Adrienne Ayares; and in an equally long affair Willie Herbert edged out Barbara Scarlett, 7—5, 8—6.

This afternoon in the semifinals, Gray will meet Decker and Rurac will face Herbert. No predictions have been made as to the probable outcome of the former.

In doubles matches, Barney Walsh and Hugh Lynch ousted Hal Burrows and Shelton Horsley, the one and two players for the University of Virginia, 6—4, 6—2.

The Jim Thackara-Don Leavens team scored a quick third round 6—2, 6—3 victory over Jeff Burrus and Bill Miller; and Tony Vincent and Bill Tully overpowered Frank Manson and John Bucknell, 8—6, 6—1.

Gonzales Gains

Haverford, Pa., July 22 (AP).—U. S. Champion Richard (Pancho) Gonzales reached the finals of the Pennsylvania State tennis championships today but he had to go five sets before subduing Herb Flam, of the University of California at Los Angeles.

The scores were 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 9-11, 9-6.

The national champion will play either Defending Champion Sam Match, of the University of San Francisco, or Vic Seixas, Philadelphio, in the finals. Match and Seixas play their semifinals match tomorrow.

Cameo Routs Thrifty, 17-4

Cameo Furniture came from behind in the third inning and administered a 17-4 beating to Thrifty Liquors yesterday in a Washington Post-Industrial League game on the Ellipse.

Cameo, first half champion, retained its lead in the second half with a 23-hit assault paced by Max Coe's five safeties in six times at bat. Catcher Ed Iloyd's four-run homer in the fourth highlighted a six-run spree.

Food Prices Still On Rise in D. C.

40 Million in Area

Fund for Base Construction Approved

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday approved a $613,815,682 bill for military construction to improve domestic and foreign bases. Projects to cost around four million dollars in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia are included.

The action was taken by a unanimous vote. The authorization bill does not provide the actual money.

The total includes:
$247,356,481 for the Air Force;
$200,682,801 for the Navy, and $165,596,400 for the Army.

The committee knocked out a provision authorizing 25 million dollars for construction work of an emergency nature.

It also added 11 million dollars for a naval postgraduate school at Monterey, Calif., as the first step in a 33-million-dollar expansion program.

The Navy acquired a 1500-room hotel at Monterey two years ago for the establishment of the school.

It is now proposed to add other buildings, utilities and accessories. Eventually the school will accommodate 2600 students.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) suggested that the school be used as a postgraduate school for all three services and be named in honor of the late Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

Retail food prices in Washington continued their upward course in the month May 15 to June 15, rising .5 per cent to nearly the point registered before the February drop.

This was announced yesterday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor, which showed that the rise in Washington was 2½ times as great as that for the average over the Nation.

A jump of 4.7 per cent in cost of meats contributed to most of the all-over increase figure here. Eggs went up 2.2 per cent, beverages 1.5 per cent, and sugar and sweets, 1 per cent. Fruits and vegetables of all kinds went down an average of 4.3 per cent. Small decreases were shown by cereals and bakery products, dairy products, and fats and oils.

202.2% of 1935-39 Average

The bureau's price index showed that on June 15, food costs in Washington averaged 202.2 per cent of the 1935-39 average, but were still 6.1 per cent below the record high mark set a year ago. The index was 39 per cent higher than in June, 1946.

The national living cost index went up .2 per cent. It was 169.6 per cent of the 1935-39 average on June 15. That was 1.2 per cent lower than a year ago, 27.2 per cent higher than in June, 1946, when most price controls were lifted, and 72 per cent above the August, 1939, index.

Wages in General Motors plants, which by contract with the CIO United Automobile Workers are hitched to the index, will not be affected for another month. Wage rate changes are figured every three months.

May Consider Index Change

The presidential fact-finding board in the steel dispute, due to report on the CIO wage demands August 30, may consider the index change.

Food prices rose .9 per cent nationally during the month. There were also advances for rents and fuels. Prices of house furnishings dropped 1.2 per cent, clothing prices went down .5 per cent, and prices of miscellaneous goods and services dropped .2 per cent.

The national food price index on June 15 was 204.3 per cent of the 1935-39 average. That was 4.6 per cent below a year ago but 40 per cent above the June, 1946, level.

Between mid-May and mid-June, food prices advanced in 53 of the 56 cities surveyed. Increases of as much as 3 per cent were noted in Manchester, N. H., Portland, Maine, and Peoria and Springfield, Ill.

Lower food prices were reported only in Memphis, Los Angeles, and Seattle.

The national increase in food prices was due mainly to more-than-seasonal increases of 5 per cent in meat prices and 3.7 per cent in eggs.

June Idle Pay Sets New High payments were in March, when $152,096,345 was expended.

Payments in June went to 100,000 more workers a week than in May.

Goodwin said that for the week ended July 16 initial claims rose to 341,600. In the week ended July 9 these claims totaled 337,400.

He said there were scattered reports of workers being recalled to their jobs, but these "were not extensive enough to have any significant effect on the continued claims load."

Coalition Rule May Be Sought

tends to dwarf the individual in comparison with the economic, political or society unit, the need is to humanize organization, not to organize humanity. Today we insist on individual liberty not in order to proclaim anarchy, but because we fear to see freedom crushed out and human personality forgotten altogether."

Specific promises which the declaration makes include:

1. There would be no more nationalization of industries and free enterprise would be restored "where that is practicable." Iron and steel nationalization would be halted. The administration of the state-owned coal industry and railways would be reorganized.

2. The commodities markets, involving cotton and metals particularly, would be reopened and bulk buying would be abandoned except in special circumstances.

3. Direct taxation would be cut to encourage lower production costs and more savings. Sales taxes on necessities would be cut later "as conditions permit."

4. Many of the present controls on house building would be relaxed.

5. Social services would be maintained and, in the case of old-age pensions, even increased. The national health service also would be expanded to provide free medicines for patients who pay their doctors. These two increases, according to Butler, would boost government expenditure between five and six million pounds a year but total cost would be reduced by eliminating "waste."

The declaration pledged the Conservatives to cut production costs without lowering wages or creating unemployment.

Communist Insults Cause Row at Rome

Rome, July 22 (AP).—Communist Senators and Christian Democrats tangled today in one of the rowdiest sessions ever seen in the Italian Senate.

The row started when Communists began questioning government handling of disorders in the recent month-long farm strike.

"Cowards, rascals, swindlers and assassins" were some of the names the Communists hurled at the government.

Premier de Gasperi, white-faced with anger, shouted that "it takes nerves of steel to put up with your continual insults. We are men, too."

The Senate Foreign Affairs Committee today approved ratification of the Atlantic Pact which the Chamber of Deputies approved yesterday. Senate debate will start late next week.

'Anna Lucasta,' After 5 Years, Opens a Week at the Howard

"ANNA LUCASTA," which opened last night at the Howard, is the closest thing to real theater this city has seen in 51 weeks.

Played by several members of the original cast and boasting two really expert performances, this five-year-old play by Philip Yordan is at last revealed here as the excellent play its long popularity attests. It is lusty drama, with glints of shrewd comedy and excellent theater.

The air-conditioned Howard is a comfortable spot and though the curtain's rise was delayed by the arrival of the scenery from its latest New York visit, the wait was worthwhile.

"Anna Lucasta's" movie debut, with Paulette Goddard, will soon be upon us in its original version as the story of a Polish family in Pennsylvania. Evidently the transition to a Negro family in the same locale must account for some of its success, but the shrewdness with which Yordan has knit his play together allows it to stand on its own. Either version should be effective, though I have my reservations on how Anna and her relations will come out on celluloid.

The story concerns a Negro family whose favorite daughter, two years earlier, had disgraced herself. Her father, whose love for her is suspiciously unparental, sent her away and when his wife, son, daughter, son-in-law and daughter-in-law learn that the son of his boyhood friend is coming up from Alabama to look for a wife, they urge him to take Anna back. Their reasons vary. The mother, a simple, soul, only wants her daughter home. His children and son-in-law see a chance to get hold of the young man's money. His daughter-in-law is an idealist who wants to patch up the family quarrel.

Anna has been living off the streets of Brooklyn. Despite her hard surface, fine qualities remain. When she meets the young man from Alabama, she does love him, but her astonishment at the purity of her emotion startles her. Though she does marry him, it is not until she's gone back to her old haunts and her father has betrayed his misguided love, that a new life is achieved.

Over the framework of this story Yordan has written moments of robust humor and shining tenderness. He has drawn his characters clearly and they have some splendid scenes.

Isabelle Cooley, in the title role, proves an able and attractive actress. She makes the central figure of the play exactly what she should be—the central figure in the cast.

As the boy from Alabama, Earle Hyman returns to the part he created and he's splendid. About his playing I can think of no higher praise. Lance Taylor's Frank is fine, too.

Although I have not seen the play before, I have a feeling that some of the cast is inclined to overdo the more obviously comic touches. However, last night's audience led them along by its evident enjoyment of the broad comedy.

There will be matinees at the Howard (620 T st. nw.) today and tomorrow, with the final performance next Thursday evening.

One on the Aisle—

Calm Your Pulse At Jones Beach

By Richard L. Coe

"THE GIRL FROM JONES BEACH," at the Warner, suits the demands of the weather. It's light-weight and lets you look at pretty girls away from the sunshine in a cool, dark theater.

What more do you want in such dog days? You can't lie in a tub all day.

Virginia Mayo plays a beautiful schoolteacher who would rather be loved for her mind than her shape. Ronald Reagan is a successful illustrator famed for "The Randolph Girl," who doesn't exist at all except as the composite charms of 12 exquisite babes. Eddie Bracken is on tap to get them together when a television contract promises a fortune for all.

The fact that I. A. L. Diamond's idea of an intelligent girl is one who spouts pages of Bartlett's Quotations is beside the point. Even Maisie, the neighbor's cat, would consider Miss Mayo's lofty quotes hopelessly infantile, but, after all, Culture has to be established quickly in the movies, particularly hot-weather movies. And if the plot depends on a school board being scandalized by a teacher in a swimming suit, I for one couldn't care less.

Bracken guards the comedy and it's rather pleasant to see his worried expression again. To persuade the bookish Miss Mayo that he's a serious type, Reagan is called on to make believe he's a foreigner with excessively broken English attending night school so he can make a Good American Citizen. This is about the level of the picture's wit and Reagan makes it as painless as he can.

Miss Mayo is both decorative and relaxed, sporting several attractive beach costumes. It's hardly a taxing role and it certainly doesn't tax Virginia to beguile you with it.

The Warner also features a "March of Time" on the Nation's traffic problems, picturing a few potential solutions but leaving the problem in the fix it's in, logical reporting. After which it's pleasant to devote one's wan energies to "The Girl from Jones Beach."

At the Met

"NOT WANTED," at the Metropolitan, concerns the plight of unwed mothers and is played with capable sincerity by some actors you'll not recognize.

This was produced by Ida Lupino, who does not appear in the picture but whose belief in the soundness of the story prompted her to back it financially.

The story tells of a waitress who goes for a rambling piano player. (That is, he's a rambler!) On trekking about with this charming bounder, she meets a war veteran who falls in love with her. All would have been well had she not discovered she is pregnant. The girl's problem is partially solved by a home for unmarried mothers, where she may have her child in peace with the understanding that it will be given a home with a childless couple.

With commendable honesty, the story on which Miss Lupino, Paul Jarrico and Marvin Wald collaborated, avoids the sentimental trap of letting the girl have her baby back when she discovers the injured veteran wants to marry her. She has to learn her lesson the hard way and one is more convinced than usual, at the finale, that this couple will make a go of their marriage.

The playing is sincere, sometimes finely so. Sally Forrest acts the girl with versatility and the veteran is well played by Keefe Brasselle, a natural, pleasant-looking fellow with decided promise. Production details are sufficient, if not lavish, and you'll admire Ruth Clifford, once a player of some celebrity, as the guiding spirit of the home for luckless girls.

Senate Unit Proposes Elimination of 'Excess' Navy Establishments

The Senate Appropriations Committee believes the Navy has an excess number of shore establishments. Its report on the big military appropriation bill says that "substantial savings may be accomplished by taking immediate steps to dispose of them." The committee also called attention to the large number of Army posts.

It is no secret that the Navy plans to make a sharp cutback in its civilian employment—plans being drawn up on orders of Defense Secretary Johnson. The outright closing of anumber of offices as well as shore installations is proposed.

The report made no estimate of the number of civilians who would be fired in the Navy, Army, and Air Force under the committee bill. It did mention, however, that steps taken by the Defense Secretary had reduced personnel and increased efficiency. The report urged "all possible emphasis be given to further developments of this kind."

TIME STUDIES: The committee added a rider to the House bill to prevent funds being paid to any person, firm or corporation that uses stop-watches or time-measuring devices for time studies and related purposes. The Machinists Union sought the rider to prevent possible work speed-ups in Army and Navy shops.

Another new section will allow the military agencies to hire additional civilian doctors, dentists, and nurses for their hospitals. The agencies are short on military doctors and nurses.

LOYALTY: The Defense Secretary would be given broad power to investigate and to fire civilian employes on either loyalty or security grounds. The Army and Navy secretaries have had this sweeping authority since 1940. The appropriation bill would merely extend it to Secretary Johnson.

CITIZENSHIP: The committee took a step to restrict most United States jobs in the Panama Canal Zone to citizens of either the United States or of Panama. The rider also would provide for a wage scale in the Canal Zone comparable to the United States scale, plus a 25 per cent differential. The rider is intended to attract more Americans to the Panama jobs. Secretary Johnson was instructed to investigate reports that Panama civilian employes are improperly cared for at Government hospitals there.

PAY HEARINGS: A dozen members of Congress yesterday went before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee to speak a nice word for the postal worker. All of them indorsed the Miller bill to give the 500,000 postal workers a flat increase of $150 each and other benefits. They were:

Crosser (D., Ohio), Price (D., Ill.), Bennett (D., Fla.). Hall (R., N. Y.), Christopher (D., Mo.), Preston (D., Ga.), Tackett (D., Ark.), Crawford (R., Mich.), O'Hara (D., Ill.), Tauriello (D., N. Y.), White (D., Idaho) and Lemke (R., N. Dak.).

None of the witnesses indorsed pay boosts for classified employes. However, Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.) has said repeatedly that he favors equal treatment for all employes, classified as well as postal workers.

Tauriello said he would vote for a pay boost up to $500 for postal workers. He described the $150 raise in the Miller bill as a "token wage adjustment."

Several of the House members said they had voted for the bill to give Federal executives a pay boost and it was now time to go down the line and approve increases for the lower-bracket employes.

Hearings will be continued on Monday.

Three New Cases Raise Polio Total To 26 in Area

Three new polio cases were reported in nearby counties yesterday, two in Arlington, Va., and one in Takoma Park, Md., bringing the Greater Washington total to 26 cases this year.

A 36-year-old woman from the 2100 block of Key blvd. was admitted Wednesday with the disease to George Washington University Hospital, and a 3-year-old boy from the 700 block of S. 26th st. was admitted July 18 to Children's Hospital They raised the Arlington County polio total to five cases.

Montgomery County's fifth case this year was a 5-year-old boy of the 100 block of Grant ave. He has been treated at home since July 14.

HILDRETH SPEAKS UP—Melvin D. Hildreth, Democratic National Committeeman for the District, talks to reporters after yesterday's home rule hearing before the House District Judiciary Subcommittee. He demanded to know when the House group intended to hear the representative of the Democratic Central Committee. Left to right are Maynard B. DeWitt of American Veterans Committee; James William Bryan, Democratic Central Committee, John Graves of the Young Democrats, and Hildreth a school board, or a nonvoting delegate to the House.

"Judge, I've thoroughly enjoyed your statement," subcommittee member Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Mass.) told Hobbs.

Testimony Postponed

Representative Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.), a leading supporter of home rule legislation for the District, postponed his scheduled testimony until next week.

The subcommittee also heard Dr. Marshall L. Shepard, District Recorder of Deeds, oppose the home-rule bill, and Elmer E. Batzell present the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens' indorsement of the principle of home rule as embodied in the pending legislation.

Hobbs said that the "mudsill" on which the home rule inquiry rests is the constitutional provision giving Congress exclusive legislative jurisdiction over the District.

"We can't escape the responsibility which is ours," said Hobbs. "We can't delegate the duty enjoined upon us by the Constitution, and there can't be any question in my mind we must proceed by amending the Constitution if we are going to do anything such as is proposed by the pending bills."

Hobbs cited the District's experience with a territorial form of government in the 1870's. He cited the debts run up by the appointed Governor, Alexander R. Shepherd, and he commented: "Like a drunkard who swears off after Saturday night, Congress resolved 'never again' after that sad experience."

Negro Vote Called Factor

Hobbs said that in Senate debates leading to the end of the territorial government, a major factor in the minds of some members for taking away the vote was sharp disapproval of Negro suffrage here.

He said he did not want to raise a racial issue, because "I think this (home rule) is a matter that is very desirable in the abstract, but impossible in practice unless we forget our oaths to support the Constitution."

As for the home rule proposal itself, Hobbs said, "This is a phony; it's just to kid somebody; it's just sinking sand; it's a quicksand bill. We cannot escape our authority (over the District) if we would, and we would not if we could."

He said the people of the District are better qualified than most for self-government "but they should have known when they came here they had no chance for a voice in Government."

Western High

Only 1 Cadet Corps Rated As Suitable

Of all the District's public high school cadet units, only that of Western received a rating of "satisfactory" from Army inspectors this year.

The rest were unsatisfactory. The year before two of the schools had been rated unsatisfactory, but all the others had been rated satisfactory, excellent or superior.

These facts were revealed in official inspection reports made public yesterday by Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) of the House District Committee.

There was no suggestion in the reports to coincide with the conclusion in a summary published earlier by Teague that School Supt. Robert M. Corning had indicated it would be best for all concerned to abandon the cadet program. Corning denied he had ever suggested such a move, saying instead he was doing everything possible to build up the cadet program.

The reports showed that St. John's College High School here, where all students participate in the cadet corps, was rated superior in 1948 and satisfactory this year. Washington and Lee High School in Arlington and George Washington High School in Alexandria both received excellent ratings in 1948 and satisfactory ratings this year.

Most prevalent recommendation running through the reports was that cadet training be made part of the "school day" rather than an after-hours projects. There were scattered suggestions for compulsory cadet training, for cadet summer camps, and paid uniforms.

A strong theme in many of the reports was the note that sutdents were "unsatisfactory" in the support they give to the cadet program. At the McKinley High School, inspectors found in 1948 that the students generally "heckle the cadets and kid them."

In the same high school, inspectors this year reported that the cadet company "suffers the antagonism of the principal, faculty and student body—it is unfair to the cadets to expect them to volunteer for training under such conditions."

Dr. Charles E. Bish, principal of McKinley High School this year and the latter part of the preceding school year, said he was very much surprised at the inspection team's report. "We have all been turning Heaven and earth to build up the cadet corps. I am not antagonistic to the cadet corps at all. I think it has definite educational values, and I think our record of efforts to build up the program speaks for itself."

Generally, the inspectors reported that principals of high schools were giving satisfactory support to the cadet program.

In one school the principal was quoted as saying "there's nothing wrong with the cadet program that increased enrollment wouldn't cure." At still another school the principal reported that in the past five years there had been a rapid succession of military instructors, including a former sailor, a barber instructor, a lady counselor and a shop instructor.

Irate Spouse, Scared Cabbie Fined in Chase

Sentences of $25 or 30 days were meted out yesterday to a frightened taxicab driver and an irate husband who made a 40-mile run to Washington at speeds of up to 60 miles an hour.

The hacker, Louis J. Remington, 31, 5416 Sargent rd. ne., said he would appeal. The husband, Irving H. Bridgers, 46, of 810 F st. nw., agreed to pay the fine.

Remington testified that he had picked up Mrs. Bridgers here as a passenger and driven her to Beverley Beach, Md. There, he said, she began arguing and he let her off.

Bridgers, who is separated from his wife, gave chase in his automobile. It ended on Bladensburg rd. ne. here when Remington's car crashed into a tree.

Judge Walter J. Casey was unimpressed by the emotions of both defendants.

"It strikes me that the public interest is paramount to the difficulties these individuals found themselves in," Judge Casey said.

Wainwright Sees Reds Menacing Far East

By The Associated Press

Gen. Jonathan Wainwright said yesterday that communism in China may menace the whole Far East.

Wainwright was unimpressed by a story that the Communists set up a timetable of dock strikes reaching from London and Honolulu through the Far East.

He was asked about a statement yesterday by Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault who said he had it from a responsible source that non-Communist ports in the Far East were slated for riots and walkouts beginning at once to block possible American aid to the non-Communist areas.

Wainwright said he had not read what Chennault said, but he disagreed with him anyway.

Wainwright, national command of the Disabled American Veterans, called on President Truman to invite him to the DAV national convention at Cleveland August 15-21. He said Mr. Truman did not commit himself.

They were Raymond E. Brown, 22, a native of Georgia, and Howard B. McKinnis, 20, Pennsylvania native. They admitted holding up cab driver Willard Steinberg with a penknife as he drove along Fort Myer Drive near Wilson blvd. in Arlington, about 2:20 a. m. April 23.

Floridians Call CTC Fine Investment

Depression-Proof As Anything, ICC Is Told by One of Would-Be Buyers

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Florida group offered to buy controlling interest in Capital Transit Co. because "we thought it would be as depression-proof an investment as anything," one of the group said yesterday.

The statement came from Doran S. Weinstein of Jacksonville, Fla., who would buy 5000 shares at $20 each. He testified at a half-day hearing on the proposal before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In reply to questions from ICC Examiner Vernon V. Baker, Weinstein said the Florida group, headed by L. E. Wolfson, wants to buy the 109,458 shares from North American Co. as "a fine investment."

"Our only concern," he said, "is that our investment is protected and the public served."

The block of stock amounts to 45.61 per cent of the 240,000 outstanding shares of Capital Transit stock. It is regarded as a controlling interest.

No Knowledge of Transportation

He said none of the nine Floridians in the group had any knowledge of transportation or any other similar holdings except a few stocks and bonds. Weinstein said he owned 30 bonds and 2500 shares of B. & O. Railroad stock.

Weinstein reiterated a statement he had made at an earlier Securities and Exchange Commission hearing that the group has not discussed future dividend policy.

"You'd be satisfied with 10 per cent for a while?" asked John R. Turney, an attorney appearing for the Florida group at the ICC hearing. He referred to the fact Capital Transit frequently has paid $2 a share—a 10 per cent return on the stock sale price of $20.

It was in reply to this question that Weinstein said his group thought the stock "as depression proof" as any investment. He added that in a depression people turn from riding in private cars to streetcars and buses.

Give Financial Statements

Financial statements of six of the nine Floridians were entered in the ICC record. They showed the following:

Weinstein: Net worth $145,000. Adjusted gross income for 1948, $176,847.
L. E. Wolfson: Net worth "not less than $2,000,000."
Sam W. Wolfson: Net worth $729,628. Income tax for 1948, with Mrs. Wolfson, showed adjusted gross income of $67,093 and taxes paid of $19,031.
Saul Wolfson: Net worth $319,840. Adjusted gross income for 1948 of $28,195 and taxes paid of $4761.
Cecil Wolfson: Net worth $480,177. Adjusted gross income 1948 of $39,613 with taxes paid $12,966.
E. B. Gerbert: Net worth $53,000. Estimated income for 1949 of $12,000.

Four Are Brothers

The four Wolfsons are brothers but L. E. will dominate CTC stockholders with a holding of 50,458 shares. His brothers would purchase another 12,500 each.

L. E. Wolfson was absent from yesterday's hearing.

Herbert C. Freeman, president of North American, the holding company which is selling the stock by SEC order, testified that the transit company had accumulated a large surplus to be able to modernize its equipment. He said it might be "a mistake" to lower the reserve.

E. D. Merrill, CTC president, testified the company is planning a $2,700,000 bus maintainance shop in the near future though it has not yet been authorized.

Police Called In McKinley Pool Incident

Police were called to the McKinley pool yesterday because of an incident involving Negro boys and white youths from the National Training School for Boys.

About 70 boys from the school were swimming in the pool yesterday morning. An equal number of Negro boys were there.

The incident started, police said, when one of the white boys bumped against a Negro boy while diving into the pool.

Henry Augusiewicz, manager of the Government Services, Inc., operated pool, escorted two of the Negro boys from the pool and 10 others followed.

Once outside, Agusiewicz said, the Negro boys began throwing stones over the fence at the white boys in the pool.

While the training school boys were dressing in the locker room, Agusiewicz said, the Negro boys went to the pool entrance, at Lincoln st. and Randolph pl. ne., and were joined by others. Soon, the pool manager said, there were about 50 Negro youths waiting with stones for the training school boys to pass by on their way to their buses.

Agusiewicz called the police. When the first police squad car arrived, the Negro boys scattered and police escorted the training school boys to their buses without incident.

General Gives Private a 'Lift' On Way to Ill Grandmother

The Washington Post

FEELING BETTER ALREADY—Mrs. Grace Norton, 74, of 412 Nicholson ave. nw., smiles her appreciation that her grandson, Daniel Bradley, 17, is home to help care for her. He was flown back from training with his National Guard unit at Camp Pendleton yesterday to be with his ailing grandmother

A 74-year-old grandmother yesterday found ready help from the Red Cross and the new District Guard commander in a moment of loneliness and illness.

Mrs. Grace A. Norton, waiting to go to the hospital to get blood transfusions for anemia, was left alone in her home at 412 Nicholson st. nw., three days ago when her son, James A. Bradley, became ill and had to go to the hospital.

The only other member of the family, her grandson, Daniel E. Bradley, was at Camp Pendleton, Va., taking two weeks' training with the District National Guard.

After two days of trying to take care of herself and look after the house, Mrs. Norton called the Red Cross and asked that Dan be sent home.

A quick call to the Red Cross representative at Camp Pendleton yesterday morning secured emergency leave for Private Bradley. At the same time, Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, the new Guard commander, was getting set to fly back to Washington after a two-day visit to the encampment.

Apprised of the soldier's predicament, General Abendroth invited Bradley aboard and the general and the private went winging on to Washington.

In a few hours, Mrs. Norton was feeling better, with her boy home "to do for" her. She thought many nice things about the Red Cross and the National Guard.

For Private Bradley, the day's activities merely solidified his faith in the military life. Bradley, who is 17 and a junior at Coolidge High, last night repeated what he said many times before—"It's the Army for me."

General Abendroth, too, was satisfied yesterday. During his "get-acquainted" trip to Camp Pendleton, General Abendroth found his Guardsmen "clearly demonstrated that they are learning the skills that will enable them to perform their assigned missions if the need arises."

Over Contract

Damage Suit Filed by D. C. Builder

A Washington building contractor in an $8511 damage suit filed in District Court yesterday charged the Carpenters District Council here with a contract-breaking work stoppage.

The suit against the carpenters was filed by Joseph F. Nebel, whose business is at 2142 P st. nw. Nebel is also president of the Masters Builders Association here.

According to the suit, Nebel and the carpenters were under contract when in 1948, Nebel became general contractor for an addition to the Takoma Park Junior High School.

The carpenters refused to install equipment purchased from the Silver Spring Building Co., the suit said. The union contended that the material was fabricated by nonunion labor, the suit states.

"Further acts and threats of punitive measures" caused Nebel to cancel his contract with the Silver Spring firm and get his equipment elsewhere, according to the suit.

Heat Hints

5. Proper diet supplemented with salt or salt tablets will stave off heatstroke, heat exhaustion and heat cramps.

Eat less, is the two-word warning. Drink plenty of fluids, mostly fruit juices and water, is the follow-up advice. And salt or salt tablets not only help, but they also help make you thirstier.

Business Group Opposes Bill On Optometry

A statement by the Washington Better Business Bureau opposing the House-approved District optometry bill has been filed with the Senate District Committee.

The bureau said the bill would be detrimental to the health and financial interests of the citizens of the District.

It applied to the House bill a series of objections made against a similar bill earlier during hearings before the District Commissioners. Among the objections were:

1. Existing District laws give adequate protection to the health and financial interests of the public.

2. The proposed bill is designed primarily to further the interests of certain optometrists in the District.

3. Provisions to ban price and credit advertising of optometrical services would destroy healthy competition at the expense of citizens.

4. "The proposed bill would vest in the Board of Optometry the right to establish rules or ethics governing the practicing of optometry in the District. Such a provision would give the board unbridled freedom of action, including the power to prohibit employment of licensed optometrists by corporations or other mercantile establishments. Their optometrical departments have heretofore and are now rendering excellent service."

Clerk's Body Found Afloat In Tidal Basin

The body of Mrs. Mamie F. Stewart, 45, Veterans' Administration clerk, was found floating face down yesterday at 2:45 p. m. in the Tidal Basin.

Her pocketbook was on the seawall nearby. Her husband, George O. Stewart, retired Navy Yard welder, identified the body at the morgue.

Police said Mrs. Stewart, who had taken the day off from work because she was not feeling well, left her home at 1483 Newton st. nw. about noon. She said she was going for a walk.

According to police, Mrs. Stewart had been under a doctor's care for middle-age upset.

The body was discovered by Robert Williams, 15, of 107 H st. nw. Dr. W. D. Claudy, Fire Department physician, pronounced her dead.

Dump Truck Drivers Set To Strike Wednesday

Area Construction Industry Threatened By New Shutdown In Wage Dispute

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The area's construction industry, just over a 6½ weeks' strike by the carpenters and building laborers, is faced with a new walkout.

The dump truck drivers, affiliated with Local 639 of the AFL Teamsters, yesterday notified the Dump Truck Operators Association they will strike at 7 a. m. next Wednesday morning unless they are granted a wage increase.

The 15 operators, who between them employ some 200 drivers, have offered to give the drivers 10 cents additional per hour, the same raise for which the carpenters and laborers ended their long walkout. On Thursday, the operators overwhelmingly voted against the recommendation of its negotiations committee to offer the drivers 17 cents, on the ground that the carpenters and laborers had set a 10-cent-hike pattern for the industry.

Thursday night, the dump-truck drivers met and voted to proceed with the strike. The drivers originally asked for a raise of 32 cents an hour, but its negotiators offered to recommend a 22-cent raise if the employers would be willing to grant it.

A walkout by the dump-truck drivers would seriously hamper operations on construction jobs in their early stages, such as the General Accounting Office.

The dump-truck drivers currently get from $1.18 to $1.43 an hour, and are guaranteed a minimum of half a day's pay, rain or shine. The present contract expired March 31. Negotiations had been going on for several weeks before that date.

Blue Ridge Busmen Plan Strike Vote

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—A union spokesman said today a strike vote will be taken this week among drivers for the Blue Ridge Transportation Co. because the management has refused to negotiate a new contract.

President Charles Y. Stickell of local 1335, AFL-Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, said the present contract with the company expires July 31.

Stickell said the local has a membership of about 200 drivers. Possible strike action would affect bus operators of the company in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

The local official said that union representatives have attempted to negotiate a new contract for several weeks.

"Unfortunately," he added, "all attempts at negotiation have met with evasive remarks by company officials to the effect that the company revenues are falling and that the Nation as a whole is entering into a depression."

Company officials declined comment.

Stickell quoted management representatives as saying that any negotiation of a new contract at this time is a matter unworthy of consideration.

"As a result of this refusal . . . to discuss even the possibility of a new contract," Stickell's statement continued, "it appears probable that the present contract will expire at midnight July 31."

Stickell said the union had asked for a 20-cent hourly increase in wages, which now average $1.40 an hour. The union also has proposed that employes with 10 years experience or more be given three weeks vacation with pay. They now get two weeks.

Most of the drivers and maintenance men who work for the company live in Hagerstown, Frederick and Baltimore. The company's main route is from Washington and Baltimore to Pittsburgh.

'Little Joe' Loses Bid for Freedom

Joseph (Little Joe) Vinci lost a bid for freedom from a 5-to-15-year prison term yesterday in District Court.

Vinci was convicted of robbery but acquitted of murder in the slaying in 1945 of Edward F. Barker, used car dealer, and Pany Casbarian in an auto trailer on a used car lot. Vinci testified against the late Raymond Connors, his alleged confederate, but Connors was acquitted on all counts.

Now, Vinci claims that his own testimony was untrue based on threats and previous beatings by the police and promises of the prosecution.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff after yesterday's hearing termed Vinci's petition "an imposition on the court."

The judge said that a defendant cannot use his own perjured testimony to say that his lies deprived him of a right to a fair trial.

James J. Laughlin, Vinci's lawyer, said, "If Vinci had kept his mouth shut in the beginning, he would be all right."

"That is true of many people now in penal institutions, Judge Holtzoff quipped to the amusement of the courtroom audience.

Mitchell, Bolet Lauded For Concert

By Paul Hume

Jorge Bolet and Howard Mitchell provided the season's finest Watergate concent to date last night.

The brilliant young pianist won an ovation of equal length and volume to that of Jan Peerce two nights before. Furthermore, he did it with Cesar Franck and Franz Liszt as his means of communication, rather than the popular type music which won Peerce his acclaim.

Bolet is a poetic pianist. He played Franck's Symphonic Variations with delicacy and tonal shading. More unusual was the fact that he brought these same qualities to the bombastic E Flat concerto of Liszt. They aided greatly in highlighting its gentler moments. When there was nothing else to do but roar, Bolet let the piano roar. It was fine work all around.

Recalled to the stage by increasing applause, Bolet played two encores; Mendelsohn's Rondo Capriccioso and Chopin's A Flat Etude, known as the Aeolian Harp.

Teamwork between Bolet and Mitchell was the peak of perfection. The orchestra was alert in the Franck, sensitive to the pianist's phrasing, and sounded remarkedly well. It was equally persuasive in the concerto.

Mitchell surrounded the soloist with Beethoven's first symphony, Igor Stravinsky's second suite, and Tschaikowsky's Romeo and Juliet. The last work is one of Mitchell's finest achievements. His conception of it is at once sound and exciting.

Stravinsky's suite is a set of four dance bits: a march, waltz, polka, and galop. All of these come with tongue in cheek. The orchestra tossed them off as if their difficulties were a cinch, except for a moment in the waltz. It is a good suite and should be used again in the winter.

The Beethoven symphony went in fine time and style. The second movement came alive as the result of excellent pacing. Altogether, it was a rewarding evening, with a top soloist and conductor and orchestra in great shape.

Sunday: Hazel Arth, Lee Fairfax, and men's chorus in Mozart, Brahms, and Strausses.

Eat to Beat the Heat . . . and Take Off Pounds

Say 'No' to Big Meals Even on Gay Weekends

By Ida Jean Kain

SUMMER slimming is a breeze . . . until the weekend. From Monday to Friday you kept the calories on the safe and svelte side, and the scales are down 2 pounds. Hurrah!

But Saturday you're invited out to dinner, or having a few folks in, and Sunday is the family picnic . . . where calorie-counting would require an adding machine! And there may be the problem of spirituous beverages in frosted glasses. Some of you are cautiously asking what has the least calories and which ones are least "heating." Alcoholic beverages all have about the same calorie potency . . . and calories are the measure of the amount of fuel. So, ice to the contrary, it's fuel. Even soft drinks count—about 75 calories. The calorie count per cocktail is about 150 . . . and 200 for the Collins family and julep specialties. But the tinkle of ice in tall glasses seems wonderfully cooling on a hot night, and mint is so refreshing. If you take one . . . skip the dessert and come out even.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Ah, dinner is served—my, the table looks pretty, with all that good food! "I ate it just to be polite" is a well-known phrase. But I often wonder if it stems from a true basis of courtesy, or largely from appetite. Think it over . . .

At many summer affairs meals are served buffet style. Do you go once around lightly . . . or pile the plate high? Do you ever go back for more? It is not impolite to say "No" when the hostess comes around with a well-laden tray . . . hot rolls, and more crab salad. "My, that was good. Well, maybe just . . ."

The answer as to whether you personally eat from courtesy or from appetite is on your plate . . . and later the proof is on or off your waistline.

Now the picnic. Eating outdoors whets the appetite which leads to overeating which leads to . . . this can go round and round.

Ah well, let's settle for holding your own over Saturday and Sunday. Look at it this way—during the week you took off 2 pounds . . . don't put them back on. Overeating will just make you hot and unhappy! You can't gain unless you overeat . . . so don't.

Be on guard. You won't be as tempted unless you let memory trick you into eating more than you actually want. Appetite is under control . . . don't deliberately encourage it. Say a firm "no" to seconds and to rich desserts, and you're still on the safe and slimming path.

Several hundred members of diplomatic and official society attended the function. Buffet supper was served along with cooling drinks, and music was furnished by Paul DaCosta and his orchestra. A strolling musician, Miss Harriet Rose, played the accordion.

Mme. Winiewicz wore a gown of white chiffon, fashioned with midriff inset of off-white lace and a white chiffon cape with yoke of lace. Under the bouffant skirt were Turkish pantaloons of chiffon, and her only jewelry was a Polish pendant with a dove of peace motif.

Father of the Bride

'Pops' Tries On His 1920 Cutaway, Finds It Holding at Every Seam

This is the seventh of 14 installments of that popular saga of the forgotten man, "Father of the Bride." This condensed version of Edward Streeter's novel chronicles the story of Mr. Stanley Banks as he watches the rise of the greatest show on earth (his daughter's wedding) and the fall of his bank account.

By Edward Streeter

Illustrated by Gluyas Williams

THE clothes carnival was on.

Mr. Banks gathered that the nation's dress manufacturers had suddenly gone haywire and that nothing which they had produced during the last few months would be used by a self-respecting charwoman for work clothes. He had supposed that the principal worries connected with weddings revolved around things like champagne and caterers. Now he discovered that these were small beer.

Although Kay's closet was bulging with clothes, he learned to his surprise that, for her money (or perhaps for his), it was as bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard. Had she been Venus rising from the sea her outfitting problem could not have been more basic.

Mrs. Banks' own costume seemed to be giving her a perplexing amount of trouble. She had interminable and costly telephone conversations with Mrs. Dunstan on the subject.

"What in the world has her dress got to do with yours?" asked Mr. Banks. "Are you two going as Tweedledum and Tweedledee?"

Buckley never lost confidence during these trying times. He appeared each evening like a faithful sheep dog, to spend it staring at Mr. Banks. Neither of them could think of much to say to one another so they usually listened moodily to the radio and to the undertone of women's voices from the floor above—a never-ending dialogue occasionally punctuated by screams of pleasure. At each scream Mr. Banks winced for he knew from experience that such female ecstasy is purchased at a high price.

Mysterious boxes began to arrive. They appeared to be from women who did not have any last names—"Annette," "Estelle," "Helene."

"They sound like a bunch of madams," said Mr. Banks to no one in particular.

THE force of example, however, is like a mighty glacier. Mr. Banks suddenly became clothes-conscious himself. Fortunately, and unlike so many of his friends, he did not have to depend on his wedding cutaway. During those fine, flush days of the 20s he had bought a new one in order to act as best man for some backsliding old bachelor.

When he had last seen the suit it had been a splendid thing—a badge of old-world aristocracy. Now it lay in an attic trunk under a hailstorm of mothballs. When Mrs. Banks finally dug it out it reminded him of something out of a sailor's slop chest.

He buttoned it quickly under his ribs

For a long time it lay dejectedly across the chair beside Mr. Banks' bed. Each day he could think of good reasons for postponing the try-on. In the morning he was too rushed. At night he was too tired. Finally, choosing a moment when no one was around, he slipped out of his business suit and stuck a foot gingerly into a trouser leg like a bather testing the water.

Well, his legs were through at least. A bit snug, perhaps, but it might not be noticeable if he sat on the edge of things. Inhaling deeply, he sucked in his stomach as far as possible and buttoned the trousers.

"If any of these buttons give way you'll put somebody's eye out," he muttered, walking stiffly to the long mirror on the back of the bathroom door. Not bad for 50, though. It was going to be a strain, of course, to keep his chest blown out like a pouter pigeon and his stomach wrapped around his backbone, but the general effect was good—like a well-preserved old oarsman.

Now for the coat. This was the crucial garment—the one which must withstand the hostile eye of the general public. Nobody looked at a man's pants. He wished the sleeves didn't fit like a freshly laundered union suit and that the back didn't make him feel as if he had been taped up by a surgeon. But these were minor inconveniences. The coat was on and holding at every seam.

Lifting his diaphragm as high as possible, he buttoned it quickly under his ribs. Mrs. Banks came in and suveyed him admiringly. "It's really wonderful, Stan. I'm proud of you."

Mr. Banks made a deprecating grimace and undid the single button of the coat. The edges parted as if they were on springs. "I think I like these coats better unbuttoned," he said thoughtfully. "You really think it fits, then?"

"Perfectly," said Mrs. Banks. "It might be a trifle snug, but that's all."

FOR some time Mr. Banks had been keeping a notebook handy for ideas about the wedding. During the day he would stop in unlikely places and jot down new items. When he went to bed he placed it on the table beside him. In the middle of the night he would suddenly switch on the light and write "confetti" or "bride's bouquet—who pays?"

One of the first notations in the book was the word "Champagne."

He finally stopped on his way up from the station to discuss the matter with that bon vivant and connoisseur of good living, Sam Locuzos, owner of the Fairview Manor Wines and Liquor Co., whom he had been patronizing, illegally and legally, for many years.

"Sure," Sam said. "Got plenty champagne. What kind you want? All the same. No good. Here's some. Good enough. Make it $45 a case."

Mr. Banks turned pale. "How many cases do I need?"

"How many come?"

"Oh, let's say a 150."

"Six cases, eh?"

"Six cases! Good God, Sam, that's almost $300."

"Sure. Got something cheaper. Forty-two dollars. No good," said Sam impassively. He was used to scenes like this. There had been other weddings in Fairview Manor.

"GOT the champagne this afternoon," remarked Mr. Banks casually to his wife that evening.

"How much did you get?"

"Ten cases. But when you think—"

"Ten cases! How much did you have to pay?"

"Sam made me a special price. Forty-five dollars. Very reasonable."

"Forty-five dollars? For what?"

"For a case, of course. Now—"

"Stanley Banks, do you mean to tell me that you laid out $450 on champagne when you've been complaining about every cent I spend on poor little Kay for things the child absolutely has to have? I think it's just wicked. Don't ever speak to me again about expenses. That's all I say."

THE TELEPHONE, which had never been an inarticulate instrument in the Banks home, now started ringing the moment the receiver was replaced in its cradle.

"Who was it, Ellie?"

"Oh, just a woman who wants to take Kay's bridal pictures."

"Some orchestra that wants to play at the reception."

"A candid camera man, dear."

"It was the little man that puts up the awning."

"Just another caterer."

"A man who wants to do the flowers."

"Only the dressmaker, darling."

What an innocent he had been! His original wedding budget had included a case or two of champagne, a couple of hundred water cress sandwiches, a wedding dress (if he was unfortunate enough to have reared a daughter who couldn't slip into her mother's), a handsome present to the bride, some miscellaneous tips and that was about all (although bad enough). The church was free. What else was there?

Now he suddenly appeared to be the sole customer of an immense and highly organized industry.

THE ONLY ones who seemed thoroughly immune to the situation were Kay and Buckley. As it grew more complex they grew more serene, until they seemed to Mr. Banks to be floating away like disembodied spirits, leaving the entire mess in his lap. It was a kind of spiritual sit-down strike.

"Look here," he announced sternly, "there are a lot of details we've got to talk over. I'm damned if I can run this circus single-handed and try to run my business, too."

"You run it single-handed!" said Mrs. Banks indignantly. "All you have to do is to hand everything over to Miss Bellamy. I wish you'd stay around here all day. You might find out what's going on."

Sol Taishoff and daughter Joanne

It's a Cinch, Sol Says

By Sol Taishoff

As editor and publisher of Broadcasting Magazine, the "bible" of the radio industry, Sol Taishoff knew exactly how to handle a wedding to make it come out on schedule, without errors and with a minimum of work for the boss.

SINCE Joanne at 19 still had two years to go at Maryland University, I had no worries. Joanne was to get her degree and that was that.

However, Joanne was taking an extra course in radio-TV at American University and so was Kenneth Cowan, a pre-med graduate who was waiting to get into medical school in the fall. They met. It happened.

The wedding was to be June 26. How were we to know two months in advance it would be the hottest day of the summer, 96 degrees, with humidity to match?

How did I handle my role? Simply a matter of organization and follow through.

1. I appointed a production manager (Mrs. T.).
2. I avoided reading any of the 11 gift copies of "Father of the Bride" before the wedding.
3. I prepared the invitation list automatically from a copy of Broadcasting Magazine Yearbook and the Congressional Directory. My secretary handled it from there.
4. I ordered the champagne without benefit of a slide rule (and it measured out to the last magnum).
5. I was measured for striped trousers and morning coat.
6. I attended one rehearsal.
7. I called Shirley Povich, the Nation's foremost sports columnist, to ascertain that he would be present to watch me stumble down the aisle as he had at my own wedding 22 years earlier when he was best man.

That's all there was to it. I do not think I have overlooked a thing other than the inconsequential chore of cashing in my Government bonds, accumulated over a period of about 20 years.

Mr. Banks, with his $1500 elopement bribe, was a piker.

What Fuel Is Best For Fire Place Use

We hope by fall to be in a new home with a fireplace. We want to make good use of the fireplace. But since cordwood is so expensive, we would like to use coal. Can you tell us what type of coal would be most usable? Or would coke be best? Or charcoal? or briquettes? G. W.

According to a Washington fuel dealer, cannel coal is the most satisfactory coal for use in a fireplace. It ignites readily, burns with a nice flame and is reasonably clean. It must be burned in a grate. However, it is a relatively expensive fuel—a ton costing about the same as a cord of wood.

Of the fuels you mention, coke is not readily available in Washington, charcoal would be very expensive for fireplace use—more expensive than wood. Briquettes are a manufactured coal, made by pressing finely powdered Pocohontas, a soft coal, into briquettes. It would be less expensive than the cannel coal, but does not ignite as quickly or burn with as bright a flame. Also, it requires a very strong draft for successful use.

Would you tell me how to clean mahogany and to fill in scratches? T. J. R.

Finger marks and light soil can be removed from mahogany by rubbing with a cloth dampened with a good furniture polish. When thoroughly rubbed, go over the piece with a soft, dry cloth to remove remaining polish and give the wood luster. The wood should be rubbed until dry because if any of the oil is allowed to remain it will catch dust and the wood will eventually develop a cloudy appearance. It is necessary to apply furniture polish as described above only three or four times a year—a little oftener if the furniture becomes unusually soiled.

Small scratches can be removed by rubbing them with scratch removing polish. Or, waxing the piece with mahogany colored wax will cover scratches. Wax in common wood colors can be purchased at some auto supply stores. Deeper scratches can be made less conspicuous by running a little iodine along the scratch with a fine brush or a tuft of cotton on a toothpick. When the iodine is thoroughly dry, polish as described above.

Cooking Outdoors

Do you know how to roast corn on a charcoal grill? Broil steaks to juicy perfection?

Tips on being tops in grill cookery will be given by Chef B. F. Adams this afternoon at a school for outdoor cooks to be held in the Garden Shop of the Hechinger Co., 15th and H sts. ne. The chef, who is champ of the charcoal grills at Harvey's Restaurant, will give you the benefit of his experience there, translated into ideas that can be used in your own back yard.

Classes start at 2, 3, and 4 o'clock and the public is invited to attend. Tickets can be obtained at any Hechinger store.

D. C. Banks' Small Loans Rise Sharply

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington banks are giving increased attention to the small loan field.

Importance of this relatively new activity is emphasized by a report showing that the 19 local banks on June 30 had outstanding $68,334,000 in consumer loans to individuals. This was an increase of $11,220,000 or about 11 per cent over the figure for the same date last year.

Had it not been for the gain in the small-loan field, local banks' aggregate loans would have shown a small decline. Commercial loans of $93,215,000 as of June 30 compared with $99,199,000 on the same 1948 date. Real estate loans of $90,566,000 compared with $88,446,000, while all other loans of $18,940,000 contrasted with $19,335,000.

The figures, reported yesterday by the office of Comptroller of Currency, also showed that reserves for bad loans totaled $1,622,000, nearly double the $890,000 on June 30, 1948. A tax ruling accounted for this.

Other highlights of the Comptroller's report:

The 17 Washington banks as of June 30 owned a half billion dollars in Government and other securities and had about 275 million dollars in cash, evidencing an exceptionally high liquidity. Deposits on the same date approximiated 990 million dollars.

Demand deposits at midyear aggregated $686,921,000, against $714,963,000 on the same 1948 date.

Time deposits totaled $208,931,000, against $216,494,000 on June 30, 1948.

GAS SALES: Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported sales of 9,051,469 therms in June, a gain of 4.6 per cent over the same 1948 month. The six-month sales total was 91,280,631 therms, against 92,024,385 in the similar period last year.

Washington bankers are watching closely the bill introduced in the Senate to authorize the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to insure individual bank deposits up to $10,000 . . . Pan American Airways' revenues in the first five months this year were slightly higher than in the same 1948 period, stockholders were informed.

SALES DIP: Safeway Stores, Inc., reported sales declined 6.3 per cent in the four weeks ending July 16 to $90,759,410, from $96,898,422 in the same period last year. For 28 weeks ending July 16, sales of the grocery chain were $652,006,212, down 5.3 per cent from $688,187,734 in the similar 1948 period.

Other Areas To Copy Soil Tour Plan

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Southern Maryland Soil Conservation Tour, which ends today, will be copied in other sections of the country, Dr. Hugh Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, declared yesterday.

Bennett addressed the tour at a noon meeting at the colorful farm home of J. Stewart Labat, overlooking the Wicomico River near Chaptico.

He has telegraphed a detailed report on the Maryland tour, he said, to the convention of Government soil conservation workers now being held at San Francisco. With it he is suggesting that the same program be put on in other states.

"The Soil Conservation Service has the largest and most efficient group of agriculture technicians ever gathered together anywhere at any time," Bennett declared.

He added that the SCS will soon need more boys" because it is going to increase its forces.

Not only will the program be copied in this country, but it may be reenacted in Australia. John Parran of Canberra, Australia, visited the tour yesterday, and took moving pictures of the activities for use at his home. Parran is a wheat, sheep and cattle raiser in Australia.

Today the tour will visit two outstanding farms in Charles County. The morning visit will be at the home of J. Anthony Hunt, 1 mile east of Billingsley, at 10 o'clock.

After lunch at the La Plata fairgrounds, the group will visit the 152-acre show-place farm of Col. G. McFreest Larner at Bel Alton.

Bill Seeks Excess Funds From State Agencies, Colleges

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—Delegate Bandiere (D., Balto. 5th) proposed today that State agencies and institutions be required to turn over to the treasury any funds they accumulate in excess of budget estimates.

The delegate drafted a bill to that effect which he sent to Governor Lane and Attorney General Hall Hammond.

Bandiere said his measure has the same objective as the recommendation made by Hammond yesterday. Hammond, in an opinion requested by Bandiere, proposed that Maryland colleges be required to spend all their special funds before using State appropriations.

Leaders at Odds On Adjournment Date for Congress

Vice President Barkley told newsmen Congress "has a good chance" to complete its work by September 1.

But Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) said: "It isn't like that in my book." He said the odds are Congress will meet longer.

Senate Republican Steersman Taft (Ohio) observed dryly:

"Of course I'm not running it but I certainly would hope we could get away sooner than that."

British Dollar Export Chief En Route Here

London, July 22 (AP).—Sir Graham Cunningham, head of the British dollar export board, left by air tonight on a 10-day trip to Montreal, Ottawa, and Washington.

Sir Graham said about his trip to Washington:

"Now that the board is working I want to explain it to the people mostly concerned. Much of the talk about our production costs being too high are untrue. Under good management our people are working hard, and cost for cost the price of the finished article compares favorably with that in America."

Navy Names Successor To Vice Adm. Badger

Vice Admiral Russell S. Berkey will succeed Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger as Commander of the Naval Forces in the Western Pacific and Southeast Asiatic waters, the Navy announced yesterday.

The change will take place about August 1 when Badger's present command, United States Naval Forces, Western Pacific, will be redesignated as the Seventh Task Fleet.

Badger recently supervised the evacuation of American nationals from China.

Burmese Minister Due Here Sunday

The State Department yesterday said Gen. Bo No Win, Deputy Prime Minister and Defense Minister of Burma, is expected here Sunday for a two-day stay.

The Burmese official, en route home from a trip to England, is expected to see State Department officials. He plans to depart Tuesday.

50 Dead, 100 Wounded In Guatemala Uprising

Guatemala City, July 22 (U.P.).—Fifty persons were killed and 100 wounded in this week's abortive military uprising, the government announced today.

Peace has been restored throughout the country, an official bulletin said.

Koreans Get Reds, Too

Seoul, July 22 (AP).—Police Director Lee Ho complained today that Communists were killing an average of 10 south Korean policemen daily. "But," he added, "we are killing Communists, too." He did not disclose at what rate.

Muttering Costs Man His Beard And Barber $5

Carrollton, Ill., July 22 (U.P.).—Barber Roscoe Orten was $5 poorer today because he cut off David Ambrose's beard.

"I was proud of my beard," Ambrose told Police Justice Walter Postlewaite.

He said he planned to attend a family reunion in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., next month and relatives who have not seen him in 30 years "won't recognize me without my whiskers."

The judge fined Orten $5 and costs despite his plea that it was a mistake.

The barber said he couldn't understand Ambrose's instructions.

"He was muttering in his beard when he sat down in the chair," Orten said.

HOME AND INVESTMENT

"A Penny Saved is a Penny Earned"

Here is luxury, grace, excellence and common sense blended in perfect harmony. Here you live in one of these beautiful apartments and collect rent each month from the other. It is for the particular people that these Tiffey-built homes were planned and effected where a family can live in absolute privacy in a refined neighborhood . . . and yet add to income, and in this way provide not only a quick and easy method of paying for a home, but also insuring a definite income when age and incapacity necessitate retirment from active business.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

ames for Travel

We Americans travel a good deal
d especially in the summertime.
r does the fact that there are ung children in the family stop
. It is sensible, however, to ke preparations to avoid the redom and fatigue that young-rs will incur unless we provide teresting things for them to do.
A trip fun bag is a simple but od idea. One can include a fa-rite book or magazine, writing per, scissors, a traveling check-board, crayons and pencils and y other knickknacks with which ur children can amuse them-lves. It's a good idea not to ing these all out at the same me, but to save some of the more teresting things for the longer urs that come at the end of the ip.

Looking-out-the-window games
e another resource to be used traveling. If one is traveling by car, a "Guess What's Next" game can be fun. Taking turns, the travelers, young and old, guess what color the next car will be, whether it will be driven by a man or a woman, whether a truck or a passenger car. Points can be given and the first one to reach a given number—say, 30 or 40—is the winner.

Police Board Urges Private Be Dismissed

A Police Trial Board yesterday recommended that Pvt. Franklin Gue, 47, be dismissed from the Metropolitan Police Department.

Gue, veteran of 24 years' service, was found to have failed to report for roll call June 24 and with being under the influence of alcohol while off duty. He was stationed at the central cell block of the First Precinct station.

Gue pleaded innocent, stating that on June 24 he had gone to Virginia to help his brother, whose car had broken down. Gue said he had two drinks and on his return called into his superiors to ask emergency leave.

It was refused and investigating officers said they believed him to be intoxicated. Gue said he was suffering from diabetes and became ill.

In another case, Pvt. Raymond R. Camden pleaded guilty to a charge of absence without leave July 14. Camden recently was transferred from the Seventh Precinct to the Thirteenth.

The trial board recommended that Camden be fined $25 and a day's pay.

Notables Go To Funeral for Rodger Young

Clyde, Ohio, July 22 (AP).—Infantry Pvt. Rodger Young, hero of every foot-slogging soldier of World War II, was laid to rest here today.

Young

The shy Ohioan won the Medal of Honor six years ago in the steaming jungle of New Georgia in the Solomons. He was buried with full military rites at his home town today.

High military and political figures joined family and friends in services that began in Green Springs, Ohio, 6 miles away. Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio marched behind the coffin at the cemetery.

"What he did we would expect Young America to do," said Lieut. Col. Joel M. Wareing, of Washington, D. C., the chaplain who buried Young on the spot where Jap bullets downed him. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas E. Young now live in Baltimore.

RodgerYoung, on July 31, 1943, wiped out a Japanese machine gun nest in a one-man suicide charge. Once, twice, thrice the Jap machine gunners wounded Young. He finished his mission, saved his company, and died.

With the nest blown up, Company B, 148th Regiment, 37th Infantry Division, made their way out of a three-sided trap with the loss of only one more life. That was Rodger Young.

Lieut. Walter Rigby, Green Springs restaurant owner, said:

"It's a funny thing, but Rodger was the last guy in the world for a fight. I never knew him to have one."

Rigby was a technical sergeant and Young's platoon leader the day Young was killed.

"That day in New Georgia, I ordered everybody in the platoon to withdraw. Some say Rodger, who couldn't hear very well, didn't even hear me. I know better. He looked around at me. He shook his head and pointed to that pillbox. He was the only one who saw it. He started forward. He knew what he was doing all right," Rigby said.

Signal Failure Halts Subways In Rush and Heat

New York, July 22 (AP).—Signals failed along two thirds of New York City's vast subway system tonight, halting trains laden with thousands of sweltering passengers.

Full service was restored at 7:15 p. m. (EST), after passengers had spent from 40 to 65 minutes at a standstill.

A power failure shut off the signals and forced scores of trains to grind to a sudden halt because of safety rules.

Lights and fans continued to run.

The breakdown came about two hours after the afternoon rush.

A policeman on emergency duty said the riders were "so pounded down by the heat that they didn't even groan."

Truman Takes Weekend Cruise On Williamsburg

President Truman left on a weekend cruise aboard the yacht Williamsburg last evening.

He was accompanied by Margaret Truman, his daughter, and Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, the White House naval aide. Miss Truman came down from New York, where she has been preparing for an autumn concert.

The Williamsburg was to lay at anchor off Blackiston Island in the lower Potomac last night, and then cruise in Chesapeake Bay today. It is scheduled to anchor off the island again tonight, and return to Washington tomorrow afternoon.

Airline Radiomen Call Off Strike

New York, July 22 (U.P.).—A strike by radio operators against American overseas airlines which had stopped trans atlantic flights for 36 hours was called off tonight and the company announced it would resume operations at 8:30 Saturday morning. New contract negotiations will begin Monday.

July Christmas Is Observed in Indiana Town

Kendallville, Ind., July 22 (U.P.).—Christmas in July was observed in this small Hoosier town tonight.

A tall evergreen tree strung with colored lights stood at the entrance to a small brick church. It had all the other traditional trimmings, too.

"Christmas is so commercialized in December that we thought a July celebration would be a good thing," said Mrs. Charles Longyear, sr., president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Wayne Center Methodist Church.

Inside the church was a 10-foot tree, glowing with ornaments, tinsel and lights. Tables were set for ice cream and cake refreshments.

Fund Approved For Observatory At Charlottesville

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved an amendment to the armed services public works bill providing $850,000 for initial work on a new Naval Observatory near Charlottesville, Va.

Still under consideration by the committee, the bill probably will be voted on Tuesday, committee attaches said.

Capt. J. F. Kelly, deputy chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, said changed atmospheric conditions in Washington make it necessary for the observatory to move. The changes, due to growth of the city, make it difficult to use telescopes for daytime checks on stars and planets, he said.

TRY IT

YOU CAN WALK ON TIN-CAN-WALKERS

You can be from 4 to 8 inches taller by making tin-can walkers!

They are simply made by using two cans of equal height and by punching holes on opposite sides of each can. These openings may be punched out by using a hammer and a large nail. Make these holes larger with a screwdriver so that a piece of rope may be passed through them. These should be near the rim of the can.

Tall juice-cans may be used and an indoor plaything.

small openings made in the tops to pour out the juice, since cans with tops and bottoms left in are much stronger than those opened in the usual way. Pass a rope through the two holes and stand on top of the can to see how long the rope should be when it is tied.

When you have completed two, practice walking and running for neighborhood races. This is not

I Dream of Long Ago

When I consider life it seems . . . The older that I grow . . . The more I like to dream and sing . . . The songs of long ago . . . The more I think about the past . . . and all that used to be . . . And cherish every smile and tear . . . Of every memory . . . I do not overlook today . . . And I am quite aware . . . That any moment I may have . . . Another joy to share . . . And there may be tomorrows with . . . Their skies of brighter blue . . . And all their golden promises . . . Of love and friendship new . . . But still I like to close my eyes . . . And gaze into the past . . . And probably I always will . . . As long as I may last.

It's the Perfect Spot For a 'Hand Mashie'

We played a round of golf at Kenwood the other day. Unfamiliar with the course, we asked the caddy about the terrain surrounding a blind green on a par 3 hole.

"Well," acknowledged the boy, "there are traps on the right and the left."

"Hmmm," we said. "Better steer it straight down the middle."

"And there's a trap in front of the green, too," added the caddy.

"Hmmm," we said. "Better not be short."

"And if you go over," said the caddy, brightening visibly, "you're in real trouble."

Called "The Crittenton Home."

CONFESSION

For once, I'm going to use a letter from an anonymous correspondent.

He says he had put in "one of those days" when everything goes wrong, starting with the absence of his morning Washington Post from the doorstep. He called "Circulation," and they promised to send out a copy right away—but by the time he came home from work that night, the paper still hadn't arrived.

"I was in the mood for trouble, anyhow," he says. "So I called your Circulation Department again, and got hold of a very polite young lady, with a cultured Southern accent. But I was too burned up to be placated, and I really got nasty. But the nastier I got, the more patient and courteous she was—and that really burned me up."

Anyhow, he banged up the phone and went stalking about the house looking for something else to grouch about until there came a knock on the door.

"A very tired but pretty blond girl handed me a copy of The Post, smiled sweetly, and said 'Good night.' She was gone before I recognized her voice from our telephone conversation.

"Believe me, I'll always be grateful to her for her patience and courtesy. Her act of kindness has changed my whole philosophy of life, and opened my eyes to the unreasonableness of my behavior."

HIGH-PRICED "GIFT"

Further information about that slick encyclopedia salesman is at hand from Muriel Stevenson of 131 Ivanhoe st. sw., who was too alert to fall for his routine.

As usual, the peddler introduced himself as a representative of a "radio survey." He had a lot of forms which were to be filled out by the listener—so that his "research firm" would know who listens to which programs.

In appreciation for the listener's cooperation in filling out these forms, the research firm would present the listener with a gift of a lovely set of encyclopedias — ataverynominalfee.

The moment the slickster brought up the subject of the encyclopedias, District Liner Stevenson became suspicious. At the mention of that mumbled "verynominalfee" she saw the light.

Assuring the salesman that she'd be glad to record her listening habits without taking advantage of his proffered "gift," she asked for some of his forms. But he didn't have enough forms with him, so he beat a hasty exit with the promise he'd send some.

The forms never arrived, of course.

The trick of posing as a "researcher" is now being used more than ever, I'm told. You can guard against shysters by remembering that legitimate researchers never try to sell anything, and never try to part you from any money.

21 Arrested For Smuggling Of ECA Goods

Vienna, July 22 (U.P.).—The Government today announced the arrest of 21 persons accused of smuggling three million dollars worth of metals and machinery from Austria into Russian-dominated eastern Europe.

Officials at the Interior Ministry said the smuggled goods included 12 bulldozers and ball bearings made with Marshall Plan raw materials, machine tools or money.

The smugglers were accused also of sending large quantities of aluminum, scrap iron and steel out of the country on ships of a Russian-operated line.

Those arrested included Britons, an Italian, a South American, officials of the Austrian government and national police force, the ministry said.

Ministry officials said the materials were turned over to USIA—the Soviet administration for Russian properties in eastern Austria.

Police described the ring's operations as "the most corrupt deal in postwar Europe."

English Election Shows Decline In Labor Vote

West Leeds, England, July 22 (AP).—Results of a special election to fill a vacancy in Commons showed today a sharp decline in the Labor Party's strength here.

Labor candidate T. C. Pannell was announced as the winner of yesterday's polling with a majority of 4109 over the Conservative candidate. In 1945 the Labor candidate had a margin of 14,136 votes on his Conservative opponent.

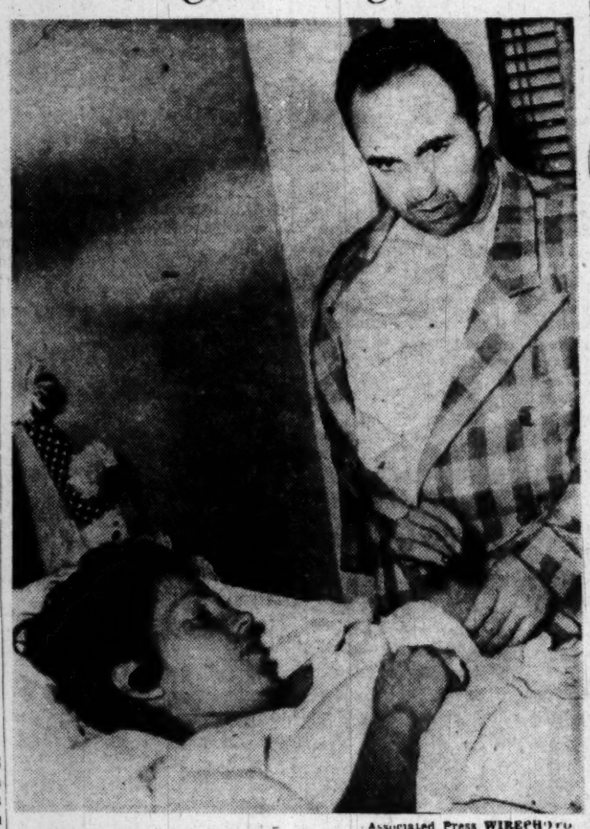
It was the thirty-fourth time since the general election four years ago that the Socialists successfully have defended a parliamentary seat.

Pannell, an engine fitter, polled 21,935 votes to 17,826 for Conservative Bernard Mather, managing director of a Leeds factory.

Casket Kills Worker

Pittsburgh, July 22 (AP).—A casket killed 55-year-old Nicholas Radick early today. It fell from an elevator in a funeral home where Radick worked, hitting him on his head.

Blonde Sought as 'Tipster' In Los Angeles Gang War



MICKEY VISITS WOUNDED GIRL—Mickey Cohen, Los Angeles gambler, stops at the bedside of Dee Davis, film bit player, in the hospital where both are recovering from wounds in a gangland ambush this week. Cohen, with a flesh wound in the shoulder, was least hurt of four persons shot. Miss Davis, shot in the back, is not yet out of danger

Los Angeles, July 22 (U.P.).—A mystery blonde, who may have given the signal for the attempted assassination of mobster Mickey Cohen, was sought by police today.

A witness gave the report of the woman as Police Chief William A. Worton was told the shooting of Cohen and three others early Wednesday morning may have been the work of disgruntled police linked to vice by the racketeer.

Lawrence E. Vaale, 49-year-old salesman who lives near Sherry's Restaurant, scene of the shooting, said he saw three men and a blonde woman speed away in a sedan immediately after the gunfire.

Vaale thought the woman may have been in Sherry's and tipped off the gunmen when Cohen and his party were ready to leave.

The suspicion that police were involved came to Chief Worton from Attorney General Fred N. Howser, the police chief said.

The sheriff's crime laboratory said charges fired were similar to those used in Los Angeles police riot guns, although the weapons were traced to a sporting goods store.

Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz said he had heard reports police officers might be involved.

Boy Floundering In Swift River Is Reeled Ashore

Columbus, Ohio, July 22 (AP).—Eight-year-old William Miller fell into the swift waters of the Scioto River today.

Fred Byas, 32, a railroad brakeman, was fishing off the bank with a cane pole.

He whirled his pole, and whipped the line in the direction of the floundering boy.

The line wrapped about the child's foot; the boy grabbed the string and was reeled ashore.

Fisherman Byas went back to his fishing. Although obviously proud of his feat, he grumbled:

"That's the trouble with fishing here. The kids always come around and ruin my fishing."

Murphy, Little Man's Friend

By Drew Pearson

I have paid tribute many times to Frank Murphy when he was living, but it seems difficult to write about him now that he is dead. One reason is that it is hard to realize that he is gone.

"A lot of people will Miss Frank Murphy. His family will miss him. His liberal friends on the Supreme Court will miss him. But most of all, the little people of the world will miss him.

Justice Murphy

For he was their friend.

Shortly after Frank was appointed to the Supreme Court, he took me into his study in the Washington Hotel, and pointed to a stack of law books.

"That's where I spend my evenings," he said. "The newspapers say that I'm no lawyer. They make fun of my legal ability. But they're going to be disappointed. And you're going to be proud of my opinions," he continued, "for some day they're going to compare with those of Oliver Wendell Holmes."

There was something of the boy in Frank Murphy—to the very end. He loved praise, hated criticism, and was always a little worried as to what kind of Supreme Court justice he would be. He shouldn't have been, for I am sure that some of Frank's dissents will stand up—as he so ardently hoped—alongside the ringing defenses of freedom written by Holmes. More important, Frank Murphy will always be known as one of our great champions of the common man.

It made no difference whether that man was a Filipino, a convicted Japanese war criminal, a labor leader, the father of a Nazi saboteur, a member of Jehovah's Witnesses which bitterly criticized his own Catholic Church, or a newspaperman who had criticized him. If the man was losing his civil rights, Frank Murphy fought for him—no matter what the odds and no matter how severe the sting of public opinion.

Tough Attorney General

Yet, while Murphy was the great champion of the man who had been wronged, he was also one of the toughest Attorneys General ever to preside over the Justice Department.

Murphy became Attorney General in January, 1939, and immediately launched the biggest political cleanup this country has ever seen. United States Judge Martin T. Manton of the Second Circuit Court in New York, had been getting away with graft for years. Many people knew this, but other Attorneys General had let it pass.

Manton was C tholic. Murphy was Catholic. But Manton ended up in jail just the same.

In Louisiana this column had exposed shocking graft by the old Huey Long gang. Frank Murphy took the columns, with supporting affidavits, called a grand jury, flew to New Orleans, and in record time convicted Gov. Richard Leche, the Democratic National Committeeman, the head of WPA, the president of the State university, and several others.

Convicted Pendergast

In Missouri the newspapers had talked about the graft of the Pendergast machine, but Washington paid no attention. But, under Frank Murphy, a tough district attorney—Maurice Milligan of Kansas City—got Justice Department support, and Tom Pendergast, the man who made Harry Truman, ended up behind the bars.

Murphy also moved into Atlantic City against G. O. P. Boss Nucky Johnson, and started to move against Boss Hague in Jersey City and Mayor Kelly in Chicago. The latter two were Democrats.

Saving City Bosses

It was widely rumored when Frank Murphy retired as Attorney General to join the Supreme Court that he was "kicked upstairs" in order to protect the Democratic bosses. I have a personal reason for believing this was true.

However, it should also be noted that with the death of Justice Pierce Butler, Catholic, in November, 1939, Roosevelt wanted a Catholic to take his place. Likewise, it was true that FDR's fair-haired boy, Robert H. Jackson, was being groomed for the Presidency, and the White House wanted the Justice Department spotlight to play on him.

I am convinced, however, that the first factor—calling Murphy off the heels of the big-city bosses—was the most important. And here is my reason for thinking so.

Louisiana Cleaned Up

By this time—early in 1940—most of the Louisiana scandals had been cleaned up, and a grand jury was considering the indictment of Mayor Robert Maestri of New Orleans on a hot oil charge. Suddenly, Chief Prosecutor O. John Rogge was called out of the jury room to answer the telephone from Washington. Returning to the jury room, he suspended the grand jury proceedings.

Learning of this mysterious move, I went to Frank Murphy and asked for an explanation. Murphy told the truth. Mayor Maestri was not to be indicted, he said. He had received orders from the White House.

That was 1940—a presidential year. In order to get the nomination, FDR needed the support of the big-city bosses, and in Louisiana the only man who could deliver the delegation was Mayor Maestri.

Frankfurter an Enemy

Ironically, when Frank Murphy went up to the Supreme Court to be sworn in, he asked Felix Frankfurter to accompany him. Murphy had recommended Frankfurter's court appointment to the White House, and they were close friends.

But in a short time, however, they were bitter enemies. Frankfurter's scathing sarcasm hurt Murphy and they scarcely spoke. Murphy was also bitter against Brain-truster Tom Corcoran, once his closest friend, but who he felt had conspired to block his prosecution of city bosses.

At first Frank wasn't too happy on the court. This was especially true during the war, when he hated to be sitting in the cloistered courtroom with the greatest battle in history being waged around him. Several times he offered his services to Roosevelt; several times he told me that FDR had discussed making him Secretary of War.

For political-unity reasons Henry L. Stimson was made Secretary of War instead, and Frank Murphy, resigning himself to the quiet of the Supreme Court, settled down to work on being a great justice.

Frank knew for some time that he was sick, knew that he might die. And, loving life as he did, he fought off death. He fought it off partly by telling himself and his friends how fine he felt.

The last time I saw him, only a few weeks ago, he flexed his biceps and said: "They say I'm sick. But feel that muscle. They can't keep a man like me down."

And Frank was right. For, though the unruly red hair and the laughing Irish eyes will no longer be seen at Mme. Cafritz's soirees, the opinions Frank hammered out at midnight will go on protecting his friends—the little people—as long as there are little people to protect in this world, which is forever.

Plan to Indict Klan Reported In Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., July 22 (U.P.). — The State of Alabama seeks to indict the Ku Klux Klan as a corporation in connection with widespread floggings and abductions by hooded bands, a grand jury reported today.

The report came as Klan Director William Hugh Morris obtained a one-day postponement on his motion to have a contempt of court sentence set aside.

Morris made his bid for freedom on the grounds that Klan membership lists which a grand jury demanded he produce have been stolen from his home.

Morris appeared in the courtroom and expressed his regrets that he would be unable to attend an open meeting of the Klan tonight at the city hall in nearby Tarrant City.

Circulars announcing the meeting were posted on the courthouse bulletin board and distributed in the courtroom.

In connection with plans to indict the Klan, Alabama Attorney General Albert A. Carmichael appeared unexpectedly today at the resumed grand jury investigation of masked violence.

The grand jury returned four more indictments today but did not reveal the number of men accused.

"There is pending upon the grand jury docket a case of State of Alabama versus Federated Ku Klux Klans, Inc., a corporation," the jury's report said. "We have heard certain evidence in connection with this case but not sufficient to reach conclusions with regard to said case. We have not completed our investigations of the same."

Klan Head To 'Banish' Members Using Threats

Atlanta, July 22 (AP).—Grand dragon Samuel Green said today he would banish from his Klan organization any member who ever threatened anybody.

Green filed a demurrer to a suit brought last week in behalf of Hugh Gilliland, a war veteran, asking injunction against Dr. Green, claiming Green was responsible for Ku Klux threats against both him and the lawyers.

Green denied doing business as the "Ku Klux Klan" and denied the existence of such an organization. He said there is a fraternal organization known as the Association of Georgia Klans, which he heads.

100 U. S. Exchange Teachers Curtsy to Queen Elizabeth

London, July 22 (AP).—Over 100 American school teachers curtsied, shook hands and drank tea with Queen Elizabeth today.

It was the highlight of a year's term of teaching in British schools under a British-American teachers exchange system.

The garden party at Lambeth Palace, London home of the Archbishop of Canterbury, was their first brush with royalty. Some had spent several hours practicing the curtsy.

Miss Helen Robertson of Norwood, Mass., a high school teacher in Chappaqua, N. Y., presented the Queen a bouquet of orchids and carnations.

"I am deeply touched," said the Queen. "I think the interchange of teachers between our countries is a wonderful idea and I hope it continues."

The royal announcer squinted at the tag and in a loud voice called out:

"Miss Wisconsin!"

Miss Dunne was so flustered she just bowed to the Queen—forgot to curtsy. Then the Queen asked her where she was from.

Mary Sours of Chatham, Va., teacher in George Washington High School, Danville, gave her camera to a friend so she could have a picture of herself being presented.

3,500,000 Italy Poor

Rome, July 22 (AP).—Italy's poor lists—persons eligible for state or town assistance—total more than 3,500,000 names. The special relief rolls of Italy's 7195 municipalities carried 3,564,142 names on June 30.

Polio Ends Kansas City Recreation Program

Kansas City, Mo., July 22 (U.P.).—City officials today ordered all city-sponsored recreational activities closed for the summer because of the worst polio outbreak in 30 years. Six persons already have died.

There were 37 cases of polio in hospitals and three new cases reported today.

Health officials said there were 11 iron lungs in use in the city and a twelfth was en route from New York.
